STRIKING TONIGHT

Montreal CUPW Jumps the Gun

Times News Services

Inside postal workers in Montreal, Canada's second-largest post office, will jump the gun on an Oct. 16 national strike deadline and walk out at midnight.

"The pickets are ready, the strike headquarters are all set. We're out tonight," said Marcel Perreault, president of the 4,500-member Montreal local of the Canadian Union of Postal Workers.

Perreault said "it is very possible" that CUPW members in other Canadian centres also would walk out before the Monday strike deadline set by CUPW national leaders.

In Ottawa, post office troubles were a priority topic at today's cabinet meeting.

Postmaster-General Gilles Lamontagne would not say what recommendations he took to the full cabinet, but said the matter would be under heavy discussion.

A special cabinet committee met Wednesday to plot the government's next move in its dispute with the inside workers. Included in that strategy meeting was Bill Kelly, the federal labor department's top mediator and a key figure in the post office's recent settlement with the Letter Carriers Union of Canada.

Perreault said his local, second in size to the local in the Toronto post office, had voted 83.4 per cent in favor of the walkout. Members of the Toronto local, he said, were scheduled to hold a strike vote Sunday.

The 23,000 CUPW members last staged a national walkout in 1975 when they closed down the mail system for six weeks.

Perreault refused to indicate whether CUPW members might defy back-to-work legislation saying, "If there is a law, we will read it and reflect on it."

"This is a legal strike and even (Prime Minister Pierre) Trudeau has said that the right to strike is a democratic right," he said.

The CUPW's last contract expired June, 1977, Perreault said, "and our last pay increase was July 1, 1976." The union has received automatic cost of living increases since that date.

Bennett Beaten To Punch

VANCOUVER (CP) — The $160 million Robson Square development was declared officially open twice Wednesday while debate continues over the use of sound in the city's newest landmark.

The two-block development contains courtrooms which won't be completed until next year, but a section that includes the square, restaurants and an outdoor ice skating rink has been finished.

The square was to have been opened by Premier Bill Bennett, but New Democratic Party MLA Alex Macdonald, whose party started the development before being defeated in 1975, beat him to it.

About 10 minutes before Bennett arrived, Macdonald, wearing a kilt and accompanied by highland dancers and a piper, walked onto the dias along with Gary Lauk (NDP-Vancouver Centre) and took over the microphone.

"This shouldn't be a political event," said Macdonald, who declared the square open and left.

In making the formal opening later, Bennett faced a group of white-masked protesters who shouted "useless, useless, useless." The group handed out pamphlets protesting lack of public participation in planning the square.

The square has also created a controversy over the use of sound to mask noises and create some privacy between workers in an open building.

Professor Barry Truax of Simon Fraser University's department of communications said he was worried that it would create problems for office workers exposed to it for lengthy periods. He said he had heard that some workers were booking off sick and complaining of headaches.

Louis van Blankenstein, Robson Square project manager, said it was an integral part of the building's open landscape design, which makes use of partitions, rather than solid walls, to separate office workers.

Hike by Hydro Will Be Fought By Bennett, Wolfe

Premier Bill Bennett said today he will oppose any move by B.C. Hydro to increase electrical and natural gas rates next year.

"I'm opposed to increased rates for our consumers," he said.

The premier stated his opposition after Hydro spokesman George Barnett warned Wednesday that electricity rates could jump by 15 per cent and natural gas prices go up 30 to 40 per cent effective March 1.

And Finance Minister Evan Wolfe, the cabinet minister responsible for B.C. Hydro, said today any suggestion of rate increases at this time is just speculation.

Barnett, manager of rates and costs, said in an interview he hopes an increase in electricity rates could be held to less than 10 per cent but warned a conservative person would budget for 15 per cent.

The B.C. Energy Commission is considering a Hydro application for higher field prices for natural gas and the National Energy Board is reviewing its decision to allow a transmission rate increase.

Wolfe said such rate increases based on an application by Westcoast Transmission to increase its transmission fees and oil producers to increase field prices, are far from being approved.

Bennett said he doesn't give any credibility to the report and he said he hopes the public doesn't either.

The premier said Hydro should be holding its rates down because the government is removing the $60 million annual transit deficit from the Crown corporation.

Barnett says Hydro's own internal costs would account for five per cent of the natural gas hike — the rest would come from increased field and transmission prices.

The energy commission is expected to rule before Christmas on whether or not to permit the higher field prices.

Synanon Snake Death Plot?

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Police hunting the would-be slayers who tried to kill a lawyer with a large rattlesnake planted in his home broadcast an all-points bulletin Wednesday night for a car belonging to the Synanon Foundation.

Attorney Paul Morantz, 32, who said he was warned he was on a Synanon "hit list" after he won a $300,000 judgment against Synanon last month, was in serious condition with what a doctor called "severe" snakebite poisoning.

Synanon headquarters, a ranch north of San Francisco near Marshall, Calif., has made no comment on the case.

The rattlesnake, its rattles cut off to silence its characteristic warning buzz, was in a mailbox in the wall of Morantz's home. Leaving the house on the way to a World Series game Tuesday, Morantz pushed his hand in the box and the serpent sank its fangs into his hand and held on as he drew back, hauling the 4½-foot-long reptile out of the box.

"It felt like having my hand in a vice and it kept tightening," Morantz said.

Firemen called by neighbors cornered the snake in the living room and chopped off its head with shovels.

A neighbor reported seeing two men put something in Morantz's mailbox earlier that day. The unidentified neighbor, suspicious because tape had been placed on their car's licence plate to alter the number, discovered and wrote down the true number, police said.

The car, a 1973 green Plymouth, is registered to the Synanon Foundation in Marshall, Calif., detectives said. Police throughout the state were asked to halt it and hold the occupants on suspicion of attempted murder.

San Francisco radio station KCBS reported a group of 60 former members of the controversial drug rehabilitation group, headed by former Synanon president Jack Hurst, presented a report to the state attorney general's office alleging "dozens of acts of violence" by the organization and asking for a state investigation.

Police in other cities, including New York and Berkeley, Calif., reportedly confirmed they are also investigating complaints of threats against reporters and news executives connected to reports Synanon disliked, including Time magazine editor-in-chief Hedley Donovan.

Genetic Work Nets A Nobel

STOCKHOLM (AP) — The 1978 Nobel Prize for medicine was awarded today to a Swiss and two Americans for research that developed a revolutionary new tool for studying the way in which genes determine heredity.

The winners are Daniel Nathans and Hamilton Smith, both of Johns Hopkins University in Baltimore, and microbiology professor Werner Arber of Basel, Switzerland. They will share a prize of $165,000.

The Nobel Committee of the Karolinska Institute of Medicine cited the three for the discovery of restriction enzymes and their application to problems of molecular genetics.

Idi Reported Under Siege

NAIROBI, Kenya (UPI) — Uganda charged today that Tanzanian troops had invaded southern Uganda and heavy fighting was under way. The report triggered speculation of a new coup attempt against President Idi Amin.

The [illegible] military spokesman in Kampala came only hours after Amin, furious at President Carter's trade ban against Uganda, threatened to take "very drastic" action against some 300 Americans still living in Uganda.

The two separate statements immediately fuelled reports of major domestic trouble inside Uganda.

The unpredictable Amin often in the past has used the threat of foreign "invasions" as a smokescreen to try to cover up the more than a dozen assassination and coup attempts against him.

Two days ago, East African capitals were swept with reports that Amin had crushed yet another plot and highly placed diplomatic sources said "there definitely appears to be something happening now in Uganda."

Amin's threat against the nearly 300 American missionaries, technicians and businessmen living in Uganda came only days after Carter banned all trade with Uganda, currently running at about $40 million a year, in a move to underscore his denunciations of "mass murders" and "genocide" at Amin's hands.

West German diplomats, who represent U.S. interests in Kampala, held a series of crisis meetings with Ugandan government officials to try to discover Amin's intentions.

A spokesman said later, "No decision (about American citizens) has been taken and we will just have to wait and see. But the situation is calm."

Amin responded promptly to Carter's embargo and Radio Uganda warned, "the life president says that he is very soon going to make a very drastic and serious step on America or anyone connected with America."

Broadbent Rakes 'Ritual'

OTTAWA (UPI) — The government should scrap the "ritualistic debate" following Wednesday's throne speech, and immediately implement increased public sector investment to stimulate the economy, New Democratic leader Ed Broadbent says.

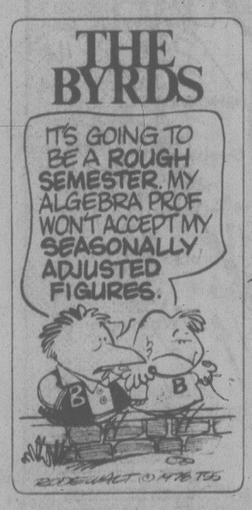

Conservative leader Joe Clark also criticized the throne speech, calling Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau's plans for the new session of Parliament a "rehash" of old policy.

Broadbent said the throne speech "made no economic sense at all," and the government should come up with a new budget.

He said the government's national economic policy "was nothing but cutbacks. That's the economic policy. And it makes no economic sense at all."

"We need stimulation of the economy and we need public sector investment," the NDP leader said.

"What we've got in the speech from the throne is a rehash of what the prime minister has been talking about since July," Clark said.

48 Killed As Blast Rips Ship

SINGAPORE (Reuter) — Forty-eight persons were killed and at least 50 injured when an explosion ripped through the boiler room of the Liberian-registered oil tanker Spyros today.

Hospital sources said many of the injured were suffering burns to the face and body as well as smoke inhalation.

Authorities were investigating the cause of the blast, believed to be the worst such incident here since an oil barge blew up in Singapore harbor in 1972.

The 35,676-ton Spyros, in Singapore for repairs, is managed by the Niarchos group.

Alert on Twin Otters After 11-Death Crash

OTTAWA (CP) — The government has issued an international alert on the operation of the de Havilland Twin Otter aircraft as a result of last month's crash in Vancouver of an AirWest flight from Victoria that took 11 lives, federal transport officials said today.

The alert, for pilots of the twin-engined plane, had been issued to Canadian operators and to the governments of about 70 countries for distribution to their operators.

It has been issued even though federal investigators have drawn no firm conclusions about either a human or a mechanical failure causing the crash, officials said. The investigation is continuing.

A Vancouver report has said investigators have blamed a malfunction in the plane's propellor reverse pitch system for the mechanical cause of the crash.

But H.A. Fawcett, head of investigations here said that while this possibility is being closely examined "we haven't made any firm conclusions yet."

There are less than 100 of the aircraft in Canada. About 500 are in foreign countries, many in the United States, Ken Owen, chief of airworthiness, said in an interview.

The alert instructs pilots on the use of cockpit power levers, recommending that they do not put the plane into ground idle while still in the air. The normal "stop flight idle" should be used instead.

Officials say the ground idle is not required in normal operation of the Twin Otters but is used by some pilots for steep approaches although it is not necessary.

There was no conclusive evidence that the practice was used by the pilot of the aircraft which crashed Sept. 2 in Vancouver harbor, killing 11 persons. Two of 11 Japanese tourists on the plane survived.

Cullen Rejects Pleas On UIC Cuts

OTTAWA (CP) — Employment Minister Bud Cullen turned a deaf ear Wednesday to provincial pleas for a year's delay in the proposed tightening of the unemployment insurance program.

The provinces asked for a delay of at least a month to assess the impact of the UIC proposals on grounds the proposed clampdown would cost them millions in increased welfare and other aid to the unemployed.

The shortfall for B.C. alone was estimated at $35 million in welfare, social services and lost revenue in 1979, by Labor Minister Allan Williams of B.C., who co-chaired the conference with Cullen.

During a one-day federal-provincial ministers conference, Cullen faced protests that the provinces were not fully consulted before the government announced plans last month to chop the insurance program by $580 million. The savings are to be redirected into job creation and training expected to cost $710 million in 1979-1980.

Williams said a delay is sought because the federal government has not assessed the impact the insurance changes will have on provincial spending "associated with a flood of former unemployment insurance beneficiaries."

Although most provinces agree the unemployment insurance scheme is being abused, Williams said, "we are not prepared to accept at this time these very stringent measures without further examination."

Keith Norton, Ontario social services minister, predicted the UIC proposals would cost his province $15 million in welfare payments.

Harold Collins, acting labor minister of Newfoundland, said the impact would total $44 million in 1979-1980 and $66 million the following year.

Cullen told reporters there was no way he could eliminate the provincial concern at a one-day meeting but he insisted the federal plan "does not have a significant impact on welfare rolls."

He could not put a figure on the impact on the provinces, and Williams said that inside the closed meeting "we didn't get many clear answers from Mr. Cullen and this disturbs us."

The government proposes to tighten the insurance program by increasing weeks of work required from persons claiming benefits twice in a year, increasing insured earnings required by new claimants, decreasing benefits for all claimants and taxing back some benefits from high-income earners.

Provincial ministers said Cullen plans to have the proposals before the Commons in a bill in a couple of weeks.

Bullets Pepper Beirut Truce

BEIRUT (UPI) — Artillery shells and machine-gun bullets peppered east Beirut today in sporadic attacks that kept war-weary residents of the capital's Christian sector off the streets in the fifth day of ceasefire violations in the Lebanese capital.

Lebanese president Elias Sarkis returned from Damascus, ending a six-nation diplomatic shuttle to Arab nations in search for a negotiated settlement to end the fighting between Syrian forces and Christian rightists.

The fighting in Beirut has continued despite a ceasefire that went into effect Saturday.

"The problem is, we never know if and when things will start up again," a resident in the Christian area of Ain Rumanneh told UPI correspondent Leon Daniel early Wednesday.

Damascus radio today carried a report from Beirut that Christian leaders were recruting West German and Belgian mercenaries to fight the Syrians. No confirmation of the report was available in Beirut.

In Jerusalem today, the Israeli cabinet held a two-hour special session chaired by Prime Minister Menachem Begin devoted solely to the fighting in Beirut.

No statement was made about the session. But an aide to Israeli armed forces chief of staff, Lt. Gen. Raphael Eitan, who attended the session, emerged carrying maps rolled up under one arm.

Israel has vowed not to permit a genocide of Christians in Beirut.

Shells exploded before dawn in East Beirut and Christian officials said sniper fire forced trucks and cars to steer clear of the main routes to Christian areas in north Lebanon.

Small-arms fire rattled through Lebanon's divided capital all night. The Red Cross reports the past week of fighting, concentrated in the devastated eastern half of the city, has forced half a million people to leave their homes, killed 500 and wounded 300 others.

Christian militia spokesmen said Syrian shells landed in the east Beirut areas of Ashrafiyeh and Badaro and the Christian southeast suburb of Furn Ech Chebbak today.

A pro-Syrian Beirut newspaper, As Safir, said Sarkis and Syria had tentatively agreed on a compromise peace plan in which Lebanese army regulars would take over some of the role of the Syrian peacekeeping troops in Christian areas.

Sarkis, who visited Jordan Wednesday, also asked King Hussein to send troops to the Arab League contingent for the first time, it was further reported.

But diplomats said the idea of Jordanian troops was not practical because of bad blood between Beirut Palestinians and the Jordanian army, which expelled guerrilla forces during Jordan's 1970 civil war.

Jaws Pry Woman Free

Elaine McKinnon, 24, of Mayes Road, escaped without injury after the jaws pried an opening for her, Colwood RCMP said.

WASHINGTON (AP) — How far will your income go in the mid-21st century?

Nobody knows for sure, but if the United States Social Security Administration's projections hold true, the average U.S. worker will be making $656,000 a year and millionaires will be a dime a dozen.

For those retiring in 2050, Social Security cheques will average nearly $259,000 a year and some retirees will be pulling in a maximum benefit of $405,000.

A spokesman for the agency cautioned on Wednesday that "these are not predictions but simply projections based on current trends. They are subject to re-evaluation every year between now and 2050."

In its long-term forecasts, the agency expects U.S. wages to increase at a 5.75 per cent clip annually, while prices climb four per cent.

U.S. Social Security benefits are guaranteed by law to climb with inflation, but so will the taxes that pay for them.

In its projections, the agency says that in 1990 the average U.S. worker will earn $22,700, with a retired 65-year-old drawing between $8,000 and $12,000 in social security. In 2000, the average yearly wage would be $40,000, average maximum benefit $23,000; in 2010, average wage $70,000, average maximum benefit $42,400; and in 2025, average earnings $162,000, average maximum benefit $100,000.

Unilingual Policy Charged

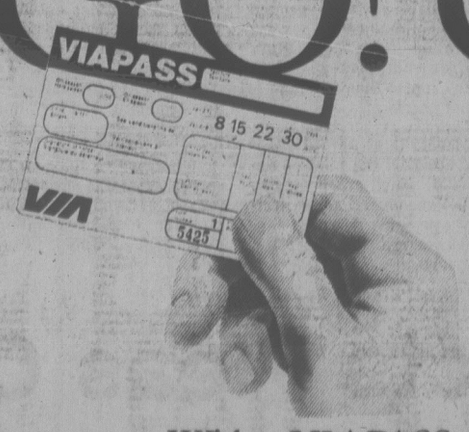

TSAWWASSEN (CP) — The RCMP has adopted a secret policy of hiring unilingual francophone applicants before hiring unilingual anglophones, Tom Siddon, Progressive Conservative candidate for the federal byelection in Burnaby-Richmond-Delta, said Wednesday.

Siddon told an all-candidates meeting here that the RCMP recently altered hiring policies so that all applicants could be judged on the basis of language spoken. He said there were three levels of priority — bilingual applicants, unilingual francophones and unilingual anglophones.

He said the policy was another example of the federal government's attempt to legislate bilingualism.

Siddon said in an interview the information about the policy came from Benno Friesen (PC—Surrey-White Rock).

Mideast Treaty Work Begins

WASHINGTON (AP) — Egypt and Israel, urged by President Carter to "stay until we get this settled," are working out the final details of a treaty to end 30 years of warfare.

As he welcomed them to the White House Wednesday night, Carter promised the Egyptian delegates he would be "available any time I'm needed" to expedite the talks, taking place under a United Nations flag at Blair House across Pennsylvania Avenue from the executive mansion.

Carter was launching the talks today with a brief ceremony in the East Room of the White House. He then planned to turn over the U.S. chair at the bargaining table to State Secretary Cyrus Vance.

The Egyptian delegation is headed by its defence minister, Lt.-Gen. Kamel Hassan Ali, and by acting Foreign Minister Boutros Ghali. The Israeli delegation is headed by Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan and Defence Minister Ezer Weizman.

If the participants stick to the framework reached at Camp David, they must agree on three lines through the Sinai's sands to achieve their goal of a peace treaty by Dec. 18.

The most difficult problems in achieving peace between Egypt and Israel were apparently solved at Camp David and immediately afterwards when Israel agreed to a complete withdrawal from the Sinai, including the withdrawal of its settlements, in return for peace and diplomatic relations with Egypt.

One of the lines is supposed to run about 50 kilometres east of the Suez canal and the Gulf of Suez. It will mark the closest point to Israel at which Egypt can station military forces.

A second line, lying from 20 to 40 kilometres west of the 1967 border, will mark a demilitarized zone in which only UN troops and lightly armed Egyptian police will be allowed.

The third line, running through the middle of the Sinai from el-Arish to Ras Muhammad, will mark the point of interim withdrawal of Israeli forces. Their pullback is supposed to take place within three to nine months of the treaty's signing.

U.S. officials say they are confident the lines can be drawn. But they say additional snags are possible if either side attempts to delay an agreement.

BIRTH PILL NOW LEGAL IN SPAIN

MADRID (UPI) — Spain Wednesday for the first time legalized the sale of birth control pills.

A law signed by King Juan Carlos appeared in the Official Gazette abolishing sections of the Spanish penal code which provided punishment of up to six months in jail for prescribing selling or advertising birth control devices.

TOY PLOT UNCOVERED

OSAKA (Reuter) — Police have uncovered a plot by a criminal gang to send a tiny remote-controlled dynamite-packed toy helicopter crashing into the headquarters of a rival syndicate.

The toy was found in the home of a member of the Yamaguchi-Gumi, Japan's largest criminal gang.

Two Yamaguchi-Gumi gangsters were arrested in the raid on suspicion of plotting to shoot a rival gang member in retaliation for the attempted killing of Yamaguchi-Gumi "Godfather" Kazuo Takoa in July.

Bus Line Cited Over Rape

PORTLAND (AP) — A $12-million lawsuit filed on behalf of a 13-year-old girl accuses Greyhound Bus Lines, Inc. of negligence in letting the girl off on a dark and lonely road the night she allegedly was raped.

The suit originally was filed in Benton County Circuit Court but was transferred to United States District Court here. It was brought by the legal guardian of the girl, identified only as Jane Doe.

The girl, the suit says, boarded a Greyhound bus in Portland bound for Albany, Ore., but fell asleep and missed her intended destination.

She asked the driver, by this time on the way to Corvallis, Ore., to return her to Albany, the suit claims. The driver refused and instead let her off on U.S. 20 at about 11:30 at night, the complaint alleges.

The girl claims she became frightened and accepted a ride from a passing motorist, who took her to a remote rural location and raped her.

The suit contends the bus company was negligent in failing to discharge the girl in a safe place, letting her off at a time and place where attacks were "foreseeable," and failing to warn her that the area was unsafe.

Tired and Shopworn

Tired, uninspiring, shopworn — these adjectives describe the speech from the throne delivered to the new session of Parliament yesterday by outgoing Gov.-Gen. Jules Leger. They also fit as descriptive terms for the Liberal government which drafted it.

Here we are, more than five years after Prime Minister Trudeau declared inflation had been beaten into submission, three years after his draconian controls program, and we are still talking about . . . inflation.

"To achieve sustained progress in the battle against inflation, the government believes it is absolutely essential for Canadians to practise restraint in their price and income demands."

Smarminess and a false optimism — just as misleading and destructive as some of the gloomy forecasts making the rounds these days — set the tone elsewhere in the speech. We are promised that the government will "strengthen Canada through unity, unify through economic strength," recalling the mystical Liberal campaign slogan of 1972, The Land Is Strong. Is the country now not strong? This a rather mechanical linking of two issues, only one of which — the economy — has much importance for the average Canadian.

More mealy and meaningless phrases betray an administration bereft of insight, bankrupt of ideas: "With good will and flexibility on all sides, and with the shape of Canada's future at stake, the government is confident that concrete progress will be achieved in the course of this session."

Honestly, how can a government running down the fag end of a disappointing five-year term of office believe that this session will be any more than the holding action of a lame duck administration trying to keep out a rising tide of unpopularity?

Again, we hear from the government a promise "to establish an economic climate which is conducive to private sector growth, particularly in the areas of high technology industries, regional development and the promotion of exports."

And what has the government supposedly been doing for the last decade? These aims should have been the prime goals of a Liberal government. That it feels compelled to restate them now (a deathbed repentance?) suggests an awful desperation in its search for saleable election material.

Using Our Money

Postal workers currently seeking a new contract with the federal government have every right to be upset with the newspaper advertisements placed this week by the post office, but Canadian taxpayers should be even angrier. The ads, headed It's Your Money and outlining what the post office says are both sides of the dispute, represent a shoddy tactic that has no place in good faith bargaining between an arm of the government and its employees. They also represent an illegitimate use of public funds.

Without even considering the propriety of using large, paid advertisements to seek backing for the post office position and turn the public against the employees, it is easy to see the ads are dishonest. In claiming that the inside workers are demanding such things as a 30-hour week, 18 hours a week for washing up and $33 per hour for Sunday work, Canada Post is using the union's original bargaining position, not the demands made at the present state of negotiations. As anyone familiar with collective bargaining knows, the initial set of demands is always an outrageous collection of pipedreams abandoned as soon as serious talks begin. In knowingly publishing these items as if they were still contentious issues, the post office can only be attempting to use the public as a club against the workers.

But even if the figures were correct, the tactic is uncalled for. It must be remembered that the mandarins who run our postal service and the lowly mail sorters are paid from the same pocket — the taxpayer's. One can only guess how much public money has been spent on placing these almost full-page commercials in papers from coast to coast, but if these public funds are available to our senior employees at Canada Post, it is only fair that the working stiffs should be given the same advantage.

Of course, the last thing we want to see is the post office and its employees fighting public battles with public funds while playing tug-of-war with the taxpayer. The proper course is for both sides to work out their differences at the bargaining table and, if need be, make their cases public through normal media channels. Heaven knows, the post office should have no difficulty gathering support against the workers — a new study by the Canadian Union of Public Employees shows public contempt is an occupational hazard for an government employees — but it need not beat people over the head with questionable statistics. As the ad states, "It's your postal service . . . and your money." Our point, precisely.

Blacks Have 'Just Cause'

A meeting of the Victoria presbytery of the United Church held on Sept. 26, passed a motion supporting the World Council of Churches' program to combat racism.

The move was sparked by recent widespead criticism of the WCC, because of its allocation of $85,000 to the Patriotic Front operating in Rhodesia (Zimbabwe) and of $125,000 to SWAPO, fighting for majority rule in Southwest Africa (Namibia). The funds were voted for humanitarian purposes.

The full text reads:

"In view of the physical, psychological and social violence which the South African government perpetrates against the peoples of South Africa in its denial of dignity, freedom and other fundamental human rights in white South Africa; in view of the Nationalist government's intransigence towards changing its repressive, unjust and dehumanizing policy of separate development;

"And in view of the Rhodesian government's refusal to negotiate with all those groups which have pressed for a just settlement in Zimbabwe over many years; this presbytery reaffirms its approval of the United Church's continued support of the World Council of Churches' program to combat racism, especially as it pertains to southern Africa."

The presbytery heard how, for years, the WCC had tried to negotiate with the government of South Africa and have dialogue with churches in that country, in order to bring about peaceful change, which would lead to a just and equitable settlement of the racial issue in that country. However, their pleas fell on deaf ears, except for some individuals, notably the Rev. Dr. Beyers Naude, who has been banned by the South African government.

The greatest violence seems to be perpetrated, not by the guerrillas operating there, but by the government itself, in its repressive, unjust and discriminatory laws and practices.

Regarding physical violence, it is significant that compared with the figure of 2,000 whites who have died in the warfare in Rhodesia, 23,000 guerrillas, curfew-breakers and families of sympathizers have died in the same period. All too often, innocent women and children have been the victims on both sides. The unyielding and oppressive regimes in southern Africa have forced thousands of political opponents to leave their countries, in order to achieve through military means, ideals which could not be accomplished through political means. Extreme nationalism has led to polarizaton of black and white. And polarization has led to radical stances being adopted.

Families who left with the freedom fighters have formed makeshift communities, which need social, medical, health and educational services like any other community. Food, shelter, clothing and sanitation are high-priority requirements. The two amounts of $85,000 and $125,000 voted for "humanitarian purposes" can only be regarded as token gestures of support for these communities in providing a fraction of these needs and services.

It should be noted that this money has not been voted from the general funds of the WCC to which all member churches contribute. It is drawn from a special fund, set up specifically for this purpose, and supported by individual churches, missions, councils and governments. If it is argued that monies voted for this purpose would simply release the funds of guerrilla organizations to buy arms and ammunitions, it might be argued that a similar charge could be levelled against a country like South Africa, for the WCC has contributed more than five times the amount contributed to guerrilla organizations, in grants to individuals and organizations in that country for medical, educational and legal expenses. These have taken the form of educational awards, grants to missions, and legal expenses of political prisoners. It might be argued that these grants might also release government funds to buy arms and ammunition to maintain the whole unjust society.

There is a need to be careful not to apply double standards. When the western world was threatened by the tyrranical forces of Nazism during the Second World War, the churches supported the allied forces, believing that theirs was a "just cause." Today it seems that the black and brown people of southern Africa have the "just cause."

And if the western world does not back them in their struggle for human rights, the gospel of love and justice will be seen by them to be irrelevant or impotent. Who could then blame them for seeking assistance from the communist nations? In the case of Rhodesia, it seems that unless the coalition government of that country is prepared to negotiate with all those groups — like the Patriotic Front — which have struggled for majority rule over many years, and at great cost in terms of human lives, violence will continue for years to come. Yet these are the very groups which are being excluded from the settlement negotiations.

Byelections Will Set Tone

OTTAWA — Next week's byelections, not this week's speech from the throne, will set the full tone of this resumed session of Parliament which everyone expects to be fractious at best, dreadful at worst.

If the government should do unexpectedly well in the 15 byelections, six of which in any case are in ridings previously held by Conservatives, the effect on the Commons is bound to be subduing. Opposition parties will be forced to conclude that no matter how high the level of discontent with Pierre Trudeau and his Liberals may be, the country is not yet ready to turn to Joe Clark as an alternative.

If the opposition makes inroads into the ridings last occupied by Liberal members, especially such key ones as St. Boniface and Rosedale, the Tories and New Democrats will conclude that they are dealing with a dying government.

The implications for the House of Commons either way are significant because each party already recognizes that misjudgment of the public mood this winter could carry with it painful penalties next spring or summer when the general election is expected. The art of killing a government in trouble is a delicate one and the art of survival for an administration which seems to have so much opinion against it more difficult still.

Cautious Caveats

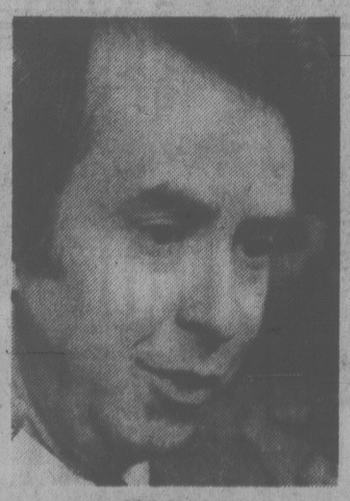

Both Liberals and Conservatives have been among those warning that even 15 byelections should not be treated as a miniature general election but there is probably more caution than conviction behind their caveats. In reality, the outcome will be taken as a barometer of opinion and a reasonable guide to the sort of tactics that may succeed in a fifth-year parliamentary session.

The opposition will do its utmost either way to make the government look inept and, if it can, even irrelevant, but it will face the constant danger of going too far and seeming to the public to be merely obstructing necessary work. An adverse Liberal vote next week would suggest that the room for outright opposition is more generous than one suggesting that Joe Clark is not found an acceptable alternative to a controversial prime minister.

The government must, of necessity, attempt to secure parliamentary approval for various of the prime minister's August proposals and its problems will not be eased by the poor reception they received at the time even though acceptance improved after he ruled out an autumn election.

But even such generally popular courses as attempts to cut the cost of government are difficult in politics because many of the programs that are being trimmed have regional importance and hence their corps of supporters. A great many people are firmly convinced that the public service was expanded far too rapidly during the earlier years of this decade but it does not follow that an equivalent number enjoy the prospect of upwards of 5,000 people being thrown out of work at a time of high unemployment.

Much that was contained in the August announcements is genuinely controversial in some or all parts of the country. Efforts to cut back on unemployment insurance necessarily will appear misplaced in the areas of extremely high rates of joblessness. Whatever positions are taken in public, there is bound to be an element of common cause between government members from the Atlantic provinces in the privacy of their caucus and opposition members in the public forum of the Commons.

Similarly, not everyone likes the proposal to cut the level of family allowances and offset the action by a new system of tax rebates. One of the misfortunes of the situation is that these are proposals which require calmer study than they are likely to receive in a pre-election session of Parliament when the political consequences of any action are bound to be uppermost in the minds of all members regardless of party.

Finance Minister Jean Chretien has promised an early budget, before year-end at the latest, and this will probably be the first event of major importance during this session, far overshadowing anything contained in the throne speech. Although real incomes have risen this year, and enough to increase the rate of savings recently, the finance minister will be under strong pressure to cut personal taxes.

The economic case will be that the deals he made with the provinces to reduce sales taxes sharply improved retail sales but mainly are coming to an end this week. Some further stimulus is needed, according to the conventional arguments, although in fact previous cuts in personal income tax did not have any great effect. An even stronger stimulus acting on the finance minister may well be the political one, that a general election is not far away.

The government has twice had to go to Parliament to secure extensions to the 10-year period within which the Bank Act is supposed to be revised and presumably it will want to get this legislation passed during the current session. Officials who have worked on it are convinced that they have a good piece of legislation and in any case these extensions ought not to be sought indefinitely.

Legislation in Doubt

The future of another major piece of business legislation, the new Competition Act, is in much greater doubt. Essentially similar legislation in earlier form ran into intense opposition because of the exceptional powers that would have been given to officials and appointed boards.

Not all of the opposition came from business groups, some of which would look without enthusiasm on any proposals to hamper efforts to restrict competition. Two aspects of the legislative proposals have caused the government problems with groups beyond the narrow business ones — the exceptional powers and the limitations on the right of appeal against judgments that could have a major effect on business enterprises.

Whether the government will attempt seriously to get the legislation in its existing form passed by a pre-election Parliament is doubtful. It had little priority at the session which came to its formal end on Tuesday.

A newly-elected parliament would have been preferable to this new session but, even so, a resumption of House of Commons activity is preferable to the long summer and autumn recess that began at the end of June.

Tragic Cutbacks

A constituent of mine, Mr. Burns on Dallas Road, seems to have adopted one of the elegant traditions of the London Times, to wit, the continuing public correspondence.

For six months, he has been struggling to demonstrate that Mr. Vander Zalm doesn't actually treat the old and poor all that badly. And so, I reply to his latest letter.

The problem with his position is that the government's own figures deny it. Let me illustrate:

EXPENDITURES
Seniors and Handicapped
1976	$187 million
1977	$167 million	$20 million loss
GAIN
1976	no entry
1977	$302 million
1978	$277 million	$25 million loss
Community Program
1976	$ 30 million
1977	$ 30 million
Community Projects
1978	$ 26 million	$ 4 million loss

There is, by the way, an area where Mr. Vander Zalm has increased his budget. Under Norm Levi in 1975, it cost $116,000 to run the minister's own office. Under Bill Vander Zalm in 1978, it will cost $145,000. After three years in office, he has increased the cost of running his own office by 24 per cent. Social Credit has strange priorities, eh? Less money for seniors, more for the cabinet.

The figures make it clear that there have been tragic cutbacks in service to the old and poor since Social Credit returned to power. The headlines make it clear that the government is actually proud of these cutbacks. — Charles Barber, MLA, Victoria.

Leave that Paper

I would like to direct my first comment to those who might be reading tonight's Times by reason of stealing it from outside a neighbor's door. You didn't steal it from Victoria Press; you didn't really steal from your neighbor as you walked down the apartment hallway. You stole it from the newspaper carrier who gets the complaint of non-delivery from the subscribers who didn't receive their paper. If the carrier is fortunate enough to have an extra copy to spare, it just means an inconvenient special trip to the subscriber's home. But if the carrier does not have a spare, it means a maybe fruitless trip to the corner store to buy one or a call to the Times to get an extra copy which is chargeable to the carrier.

My second comment is directed to those subscribers who occasionally do not find their paper there when they expect it. Sometimes, I know, a carrier will miss a customer by accident, but for the most part they do a pretty good job. Some of the apartment buildings have no secure place to put a newspaper, it must be left outside the individual apartment doors and occasionally a passerby helps himself to a free copy.

My final beef is about those people who have a complaint and think that a young newspaper carrier is fair game for all the cursing, swearing and general verbal abuse that they send down the telephone to the sometimes innocent carrier. He has to take this abuse, becoming angry at the injustice because he knows darn well that if he lets go and retaliates in kind, the complainant will be on the phone to the Times office to complain about him. — A Carrier's Parent

Pope's Death Raises Questions on 'Divine Guidance'

By CLIFFORD LONGLEY
Times of London

Pope John Paul's reign, widely hailed as the beginning of a new era and a new style of leadership, ended on a sudden note of sadness and tragedy, throwing another shade of light upon the modern papacy. The death of a pope had the power to set the world mourning, as was proved by the passing of Pope Paul: it is now seen to have the power to cause shock and a sense of bewilderment.

No other world leader is so consciously chosen by a process designed to divine the will of God, by prayer, spiritual preparation, and the isolation of those taking part in the divining. It was the obvious sincerity and devotion of the cardinals to this process that gave their choice its particular claim to authority. After the conclave which elected Cardinal Luciani as Pope, several of the cardinals spoke almost as if they had been swept off their feet by the supernatural momentum of the conclave.

Cardinal Hume's immediate words, that Albino Luciani had emerged as "God's candidate", are painful to recall. If, as most of the cardinals appeared to believe, Cardinal Luciani had been chosen more by the Holy Spirit than by themselves, it is impossible not to ask: "To what purpose?" Alternatively, a reign cut short so pointlessly raises reasonable doubts about the amount of weight that should be given to divine guidance.

Even if Pope John Paul's death was the working of some inscrutable providence, history knows of papacies that better deserved to be peremptorily concluded. The Borgia popes slept peacefully enough.

JOHN PAUL
... what purpose?

The Christian tradition which doubts the wisdom of questioning the ways of God in adversity has now correspondingly given warning of the dangers of praising God when things go well. There is a natural temptation to attribute to God the acts and intentions of men, particularly when they are consciously based on prayers for guidance. Nothing is likely to be more devastating than for a prayer to be seen to be answered, and the answer hailed as such, then the answer contradicted.

It will be a somewhat chastened conclave of cardinals that meets in Rome now, and the authority of the Holy Spirit will not so readily be invoked to support the eventual choice. It will not escape notice that whoever is deemed to be the right man in the autumn was found unsuitable in the summer.

In fact a mood of sorrow may make all the difference to the outcome. Whatever faith is put in the claim to divine guidance, at the level of grace, it is plain that the cardinals were moved, at the level of nature, by powerful psychological forces. They felt, several of them have since said, as if all the worldly and political speculations had been left behind them when they entered the Sistine Chapel. Their mood, whether natural or supernatural in origin, must have been a prevailing influence in their choice. A different mood could lead them in different directions, and a less suitable candidate in August could become the appropriate selection two months later.

That is not likely to lead them back to the safety of the Italian curial cardinals, however, unless they are to repudiate the emphasis on the pastoral which brought Cardinal Luciani to the fore. It seems as if none of the other Italian non-curial cardinals were strong candidates: for various reasons they scarcely figure in any short-list.

The Pope's sudden death must have brought closer than ever before the prospect of a non-Italian. That is the logic of the gradual reduction of Italian members of the college of cardinals anyway: there must come a point eventually, as Italians give way to non-Italians in the curia, when the Italians present too narrow a field of choice. If the curial cardinals are eliminated, that point may well have arrived.

Only the presence of Cardinal Luciani in the Italian hierarchy obscured that point last time.

That brings attention back to the non-Italians, of whom a selection of possible contenders would have to include Cardinals Willebrands, Lorscheider, Arns, Pironio, or Ratzinger. The latter suffers from the disadvantage of being German: certain nationalities are held to count against a man. For similar reasons Cardinals Hume or Marty (of Paris) can only be outsiders. Pironio is within the curia, and Willebrands half in, having two top jobs.

The case for Pironio must be fairly strong, but once a curial cardinal is regarded as eligible, it is harder to make a case against Cardinals Baggio, Pignedoli, Benelli, or Bertoli, the Italian curial front-runners.

But the great imponderable is the mood of the conclave, which is bound to be different from almost every one of its predecessors considering the extraordinary circumstances of its reconvening.

'Big Brother' Fear Grips W.Germany

By PATRICIA CLOUGH
New York Times

COLOGNE — Driving along the Innere Kanalstrasse, a busy thoroughfare in Cologne, many a German must have cast a thoughtful eye at a dull, anonymous office block behind a high barbed-wire fence.

Is it really a bulwark of West Germany's democracy or does it house some embryonic Big Brother, some grave insidious danger to the freedom it is supposed to defend?

Events have combined to give the Federal Office for the Protection of the Constitution — West Germany's security and counter-espionage service, a reputation which is difficult to shake off — events like the bugging of a nuclear scientist who had friends in terrorist circles; lists passed on to border police of hundreds of supposedly extremist, but in fact largely innocuous, publications and organizations to be watched.

There have been reports, as yet unsubstantiated, that it notes down who takes left-wing books out of libraries. People who unwittingly sat in the same railway compartment as terrorist contacts have been entered in its computers as "contacts of contacts."

Its image, as far as the left-wing is concerned, has become further tainted, in connection with the Berufsverbot, the practice of excluding members of communist organizations from public service jobs. The Verfassungsschutz, as it is called in German, is required to provide the authorities with information it has on prospective candidates.

The incidents have prompted not only extremists but also more liberal Germans to ask themselves whether their country is on the way to becoming a surveillance state — a verfassungsschutzstaat.

The public and sometimes emotional debate about the aims and methods of the Verfassungsschutz may surprise the average Westerner who probably has at the most only a foggy idea about how such things are done at home, and certainly loses little sleep about it.

Even more astonishing, in view of all the fuss, is that here, for the most part, the cloak and dagger is replaced by glass walls and red tape. James Bond fans must find it difficult to imagine a secret service which publishes, an annual report, has a press office and produces booklets about how it works.

The name of its president, Dr. Richard Meier, is in any official handbook and a parliamentary control commission is there to watch for abuses and its agents are bound to obey the law.

In addition there are two other checks on its activities which the constitutional fathers can hardly have foreseen. One is a habit of leaks, whether from inside or outside the organization is not certain, which have disclosed questionable activities but also served to hamper legitimate investigations. The second is the political row which accompanies any faux pas.

The interior minister, who is in charge of the Verfassungsschutz, is held personally responsible for mistakes and would be regarded as weak and incompetent if he did not know what his subordinates were up to.

This rather curious situation is the result of an attempt to learn from two lessons of history. The inability of the pre-war Weimar democracy to prevent the Nazis coming to power legally has shown that a German democracy must have the means actively to defend itself against those who might subvert it from within.

Secondly, bitter memories of the Gestapo and the SS have ensured that the Verfassungsschutz was given no executive powers. It cannot question ... search premises ... it can only pass on the information it has gathered to the appropriate authorities. It is the same memories which have made the whole subject a highly distasteful and sensitive issue in West Germany.

Difficult times for the Verfassungsschutz started with the upsurge of the radical new left in the late 1960s, their threat to "march through the institutions," and later, with the emergence of terrorism. In a period of a few years the organization came, as leading officials say, an "industry of information" about extremists.

Running a secret service in the glare of publicity is not easy. The Verfassungsschutz people envy the discretion which surrounds their British colleagues. "They live in paradise, they don't know the problems," they say.

Members of special task force train to fight terrorists

Every time a touchy case comes up they have to think not only about their work but how it is to be handled politically. Ministers and officials must be informed and their backing obtained, and the possible consequences, if things should go wrong, must be worked out in advance.

One examples of the difficulties was the case of the bug placed in the nuclear scientist's home. The possibility of terrorists gaining access to nuclear installations or nuclear know-how was appalling, yet by law an individual's privacy is inviolable.

The resulting scandal contributed to the later downfall of the interior minister of the day. Would any other European secret service have Verfassungsschutz people believe they would.

Officials feel that the accusations of unwarranted snooping and sinister behavior are the result of distorted press reports and ignorance about their real task.

Nevertheless, the existence of lists drawn up without authorization by junior officials of supposed extremist publications and organizations, which include such things as harmless civic action groups and feminist magazines, made people wonder about the real atmosphere inside the organization.

Another problem is the psychological effect on young radicals of being spied on, photographed at demonstrations, having their mail opened. The Verfassungsschutz is aware that it is making many people into lifelong enemies of the system it is there to defend.

But in the Innere Kanalstrasse there is no answer to this. "This is the natural consequence of our work. It is not our problem."

Human Touch

By MICHAEL ROBINSON

In my four undergraduate years at the University of B.C. I made some good friends, was introduced to my wife, and learned something about human behavior. I learned that it was possible for the president of a 20,000-student university to know me by name and to care about my career. I realized that a populist approach to management based largely on small committees and a human touch works.

President Walter Gage's office had two rooms: one where four secretaries ran bursaries and awards and the dean's calendar, and one where Walter Gage met students. You had to make an appointment to see him, but you never had to wait more than a few days. If he could, he would squeeze you in between the dean of applied science and the chairman of the board — and keep the chairman of the board waiting a few minutes while he talked with you about the Alma Mater Society elections.

Walter Gage's administration of UBC was unmarked by management crises and communications breakdown. He ran the university on a family model and he was everyone's father. Today his children work all over the province and we will not forget the power of his human touch.

Count Me Out of This Game

katharine whitehorn

It is no longer enough to have a pocket calculator. Nowadays, they sell them combined with cigarette lighters or wallets or radios or poker chips, or hung round you neck on a gold chain. Personally, I'd like to wear one in each ear, because tucked away back there I wouldn't have to look at them.

It's an obsession — and I don't think it is just the simple joy of being let off the pains of arithmetic, which we all failed to master at school. It reflects a general helplessness in the face of numbers, and a touching faith that possession of this juju will somehow control their unpredictable sorcery.

Our minds are nowhere near as comfortable with numbers as with words or even concepts. You can't, for example, take in more than five people walking towards you without actually counting, yet you get headlines of more than five letters even in the Sun. And everyone finds the all-figure telephone exchanges harder to remember. (You can always try relating them to the time people go to work — 2:30 sounds about right for the civil servants of Westminster.)

But I fear we ought to fight back against numbers a good deal more than we do. I don't simply mean we should say, "figures can prove anything" and ignore them — figures can't prove everything and we shouldn't let them get away with seeming to do so.

Every movie ever made had "the biggest box-office takings ever" because of the effect of inflation on the figures. Firms which put a low value on their assets have a higher return on them than those who put a high value on them. And unscrupulous movie firms can offer a share of profit to the script-writer, and then, by carefully fiddling the statement of costs, make only too sure there are no profits.

It seems absurd to me that the Archbishop of Canterbury urged us all to pray for aborted foetuses a year or so ago, because their abortions were murders; they were so, however many or few were carried out. Or, if they prevented unwanted children, then they were a blessing. The actual size of the figure surely meant nothing in this respect. And it gets my goat when some doctor gets up at a meeting of learned professionals and denounces the British woman for consuming 8 million asprins per year.

If I have a headache, and two asprins will stop it, why is it better or worse that another 7,999,999 women have found similar relief? If we only ate 50,000 aspirins a year, would that be all right? And, if so, how am I to know whether I am the 49,999th woman to reach for the pill-bottle, or the 50,000st?

And look at the way they "calculate" the cost of the nation's illness. "Road accidents cost the National Health Service X millions of pounds a year," they trumpet. Well, possibly you can calculate the cost of the cardiac unit, nurse time, crutches and laundry (in the unlikely event that anyone's come off strike long enough to do any). But how much would the man have cost the health service if he hadn't had a cracked skull? He might have needed 10 years of geriatric nursing and a hip replacement instead — you just can't tell.

People try to put far too many things into figures. The trend reached its most loony with the Roskill commission on airports, and all those daft attempts to reduce church spires and local feelings to pounds, shillings, pence, as it then was. The idiocy was not just that you can't put such things into figures, but that, even if you could, you certainly couldn't do it accurately enough to be of the slightest use by mathematical standards. All you're doing is trying to give an impression of accuracy to your serious guesses.

Worse: I have it from someone who speaks, not from beneath a struggling rugger-scrum of figures like me, but from what you could call a referee's position (the board of ICI, to be precise) that the tendency to reduce too much to mathematics is not even merely useless. It leads, he says, to "a worship of the justifiable" — which makes you think the conclusion that can be justified best is the right one; and that's where the rot sets in.

If anyone told Belisarius that there was an army of 10,000 men marching against him, he would reply: "Very few generals can handle 10,000 men." If they then screamed — "It's 20,000 men!" — he would say calmly: "Even fewer generals can handle 20,000 men." I reckon there are precious few of us who can handle 20,000 anything, and that it's safer to understand that from the start.

The Peugeot 604

How do you put a price ticket on prestige?

The 79's are coming... but the 78's are going fast!
Get one now!

Many factors may influence your choice of a 604. Money is one of them, of course. But the sheer prestige that ownership of a Peugeot 604 confers can't be reduced to dollars and cents. Quite obviously, your choice reflects a deep concern for comfort, safety, reliability, smoothness of ride, manageability, quietness, and the highest standards of quality.* But the Peugeot 604 is also the embodiment of prestige; and you can't put a price on that.

RAISES PRICES

TORONTO (CP) — Noranda Sales Corp. has raised domestic and U.S. prices for electrolytic copper cathode by one cent a pound. The Canadian price will be 82.5 cents and the U.S. price 70 cents.

neat is best

Three cheers for the well-groomed look . . . it's back in style for the younger set. This boy has fine, fly-away hair, but by proper blending and conditioning it turned into an easy-to-care-for style. Due to careful cutting this style will continue to look good as it gradually grows out over the next few weeks.

CSBs to Stay Competitive

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

The interest rate on Canada Savings Bonds will be raised as high as necessary to make it fully competitive with other rates, Bank of Canada representative Donald Black said Wednesday.

"If the government finds the bonds are not selling, the rate will be increased," Black said.

Anyone buying a bond at the present yield of 8.9 per cent would immediately receive the higher rate.

But it is not clear if a higher rate will be necessary.

"At the moment the bonds are fully competitive."

The bonds pay 8.5 per cent in the first year and then 9 per cent in the remaining six years for an average yield of 8.9 per cent.

The only thing that could put upward pressure on the CSB rate would be an increase in the Bank of Canada rate.

"And you have to remember it is the same guys setting the rules."

Black is executive vice-president of Houston Willoughby Investments Ltd. of Regina and is public relations representative for the Bank of Canada's bond sale.

He noted that only once in history has the Bank of Canada increased general interest rates during a CSB campaign.

"That was in 1956 and, interestingly, there was a currency crisis."

But the CSB rate did not go up that year. If the rate did go up during this campaign, it would be the first time.

"This is a precedent the federal government does not want to set. It will take some other action, I'm sure, to support the dollar without increasing interest rates."

But investors should feel secure, he said, because rates can be increased at any time for their benefit. This process is handled more easily than in the past now that all payments are worked through computer, rather than coupons.

Those buying regular interest bonds would simply receive a higher interest cheque at year's end if interest was increased during the year. Interest could not go lower as the bonds are fully guaranteed.

Those buying accrued interest bonds would have the higher amount credited to their bonds in the event the rate was increased after the bond was purchased.

"Canada Savings Bonds are better than money because they can be cashable at any time and there is a minimum interest guaranteed. The interest rate can be increased."

Black said Ottawa is hoping for a record $7.5 billion CSB sale, of which $4.5 billion will be a rollover of maturing bonds and the remaining $3 billion would be new money.

"We hope people will bring their maturing bonds to the bank or to their investment counsellor right away because there is going to be a big rush after Nov. 1.

"There are about one million Canadians holding bonds that mature on Nov. 1 and the lineups will be long on that date. The bonds can be brought in in advance and they should be."

The lineups will be particularly long in Victoria because of the high number of people buying bonds in this city.

"We don't have numbers but we believe Victoria has about the highest per capita holding of Canada Savings Bonds in the country. This is the retirement capital of Canada and the bonds are favored by older investors in particular because they are fully guaranteed."

Black said Ottawa releases sales figures by province only and not by city but the experience of banks and other investment houses indicates the bonds are particularly popular in Victoria.

Black said an investor can buy only a maximum of $30,000 worth of bonds this year. However, someone with $60,000 worth of maturing bonds can roll over the full amount into new bonds and, in addition, buy his quota of $30,000 worth of bonds for cash.

"This fact may be of interest to only a small number of people," he said.

North Industry Park Opened

PRINCE RUPERT (CP) — A 55-acre industrial park designed to draw investors and developers to this northern British Columbia port city was officially opened Wednesday.

The 38 serviced lots range from two-thirds of an acre to about three acres. The park, under construction for more than two years, was engineered and financed by the British Columbia Development Corporation.

MLA Graham Lea (NDP—Prince Rupert) and mayor Peter Lester participated in the ceremony after Economic Development Minister Don Phillips was unable to attend because of illness.

Lester said he did not expect the park to signal immediate industrialization of the area but said the city "is preparing for a slow, steady growth."

Cost per acre is about $80,000, which BCDC says covers the expense of preparing each acre for heavy industrial needs.

BCDC chairman Newell Morrison said five lots have been sold and negotiation are underway with 17 prospective purchasers.

The park is located at Butze Rapids, about 4.5 kilometres east of here.

EXPERIMENTAL PROGRAM

MONTREAL (CP) — Air Canada has announced the start of an experimental program to test the effectiveness and suitability of including tour program information and reservation facilities in its ReserVec 11 computer system. The airline expects the results to have been evaluated by next summer. Currently, tour programs are not listed and travel agents' reservations must be made directly by telephone with wholesalers.

Clamps on Cabaret Licences

A moratorium has been placed on the issuance of cabaret licences in Victoria, Nanaimo, Kamloops, Vancouver, Burnaby and several smaller communities, the general manager of the liquor administration branch (LAB) said Wednesday.

Vic Woodland revealed the moratorium after the issue was raised Tuesday when the Penthouse Cabaret in Vancouver, cleared by the courts of morals charges earlier this year, was denied its cabaret liquor licence and offered a dining lounge licence instead.

Vancouver council last month granted conditional cabaret and restaurant business licenses to Celebrity Enterprises, operators of the Penthouse, for the balance of 1978.

"Now, because the province has refused the cabaret license, we are not able to issue it as well," said Roger Herbert, acting director of permits and licences in Vancouver.

Woodland said there has been a proliferation of cabarets in Vancouver and the existing 22,000 nightclub seats are more than the city requires.

"There have been several bankruptcies and other difficulties involving cabarets in recent years," he said. "Two other licences were cancelled because organized crime was involved in them."

He did not name the businesses.

BURTON'S COMING

Canadian rock star Burton Cummings, complete with his own white grand piano, is set to perform at Memorial Arena Saturday night, the first time he has ever appeared in Victoria.

Cummings, who takes his white Steinway everywhere, has scheduled an 8 p.m. concert here as part of a cross-country tour.

Former Guess Who member Cummings has struck gold with three solo albums since his split with the group.

The Winnipeg native's debut album, Burton Cummings, has sold more than one million copies, as did My Own Way to Rock and Dream of a Child, released in May.

Cummings joined the Guess Who at 18.

Expert Scores Point Method At Crosswalks

The "point-and-cross" method for pedestrians to cross at crosswalks points only to confusion and worse if it is adopted in Saanich, according to the municipality's traffic experts.

At a meeting Wednesday of council's advisory traffic committee, Inspector Ted Owens spoke against the proposal supported by Ald. Ian Cass.

Owens said one of his objections to the scheme is that many pedestrians have no understanding how long it takes to stop a vehicle:

"Many pedestrians feel they can boldly step out in front of traffic and all will be well.."

Although the committee rejected the proposal, it was agreed that other Greater Victoria councils be asked for their opinion.

Voice for Rent Not Breathing

VANCOUVER (CP) — Rent-A-Voice operator Leo Ouimet will deliver telephone messages of almost any kind and any length of up to about 15 minutes.

However, Ouimet says he will not convey calls involving obscenities or heavy breathing.

Ouimet, 33, a former social worker, said in an interview he hopes to make a living from the calls. He had been working with juvenile delinquents in Montreal.

"I've been at it for only a few days, starting with a small ad in the personals section of the Vancouver papers. I also have a small office in Kitsilano and a receptionist on a rather small salary."

Ouimet said he has already successfully acted for a man in giving an apology to his girlfriend after a quarrel and has played a helpful role in one or two domestic disputes.

"Unfortunately, I also spoke for a man who wanted to terminate a relationship with a young woman and that wasn't as much fun," he said.

Genetic Discovery Wins Nobel

Restriction enzymes, discovered by the 49-year-old Arber, provide "chemical knives" to cut genes into defined fragments.

Smith, 47, verified Arber's hypothesis and the 49-year-old Nathans pioneered the application of restriction enzymes to genetics.

Last Thursday the Swedish Academy of Letters awarded the Nobel literature prize to Yiddish author Isaac Bashevis Singer, a New York resident.

The institute said the discoveries by Arber, Smith and Nathans have far-reaching consequences for genetics, the science that seeks to describe and explain how genes, the basic units of heredity, are organized in cells and determine the characteristics of living organisms.

The discovery of restriction enzymes provided new methods for detailed chemical analysis of the mechanism of gene action, the institute said.

"Even though these enzymes have only been available for a few years, their application to genetics has already led to new and far-reaching results, in particular concerning the organization and expression of genes (DNA) of higher animals. All work in this area, carried out by many research groups around the world, is based on the discoveries made by these three laureates," the institute added.

DNA is the acronym for the giant nucleic acid molecules in chromosomes that contain the so-called genetic information code governing heredity in man and animals. Chromosomes are microscopic rod-shaped bodies in the nucleus of cells.

These enzyme "knives" are used to dissect DNA into smaller defined fragments. These may be used to determine the order of genes or chromosomes, to analyze the chemical structure of genes, or to create new combinations of genes.

The latter is the so-called "genetical engineering" process that in recent years has raised ethical questions about the possibility that scientists could arbitrarily fashion human beings according to their own designs.

"Increased knowledge in this area should help in the prevention and treatment of malformations, hereditary diseases and cancer," the institute said.

"We can now begin to answer questions of central biological importance in developmental biology — how do genes direct the evolution of a fertilized egg to a complete individual with many different organs? What determines that the cells within one organ normally retain their specialized functions?"

The Nobel Prize in economics will be awarded next Monday, and the physics and chemistry prizes next Tuesday. The 1978 Nobel Peace Prize, if any, will be announced later this month but the date has not been given.

Workshop Set On Alcoholism

Provincial Health Minister Robert McClelland Tuesday will open a two-day workshop on alcoholism and its effects on the family.

Sponsored by the Greater Victoria Drug and Alcohol Rehabilitation Society, the public session is part of Alcohol Awareness Week which runs Oct. 16 to 20.

The workshop will be held in Fellowship Hall, First United Church, at Quadra and Balmoral Streets. Registration fee is $12 for the entire session.

Steven Earll, of the Johnson Institute of Minneapolis, one of the best known schools of alchohlism study on the continent, will conduct day-long workshops Tuesday and Wednesday.

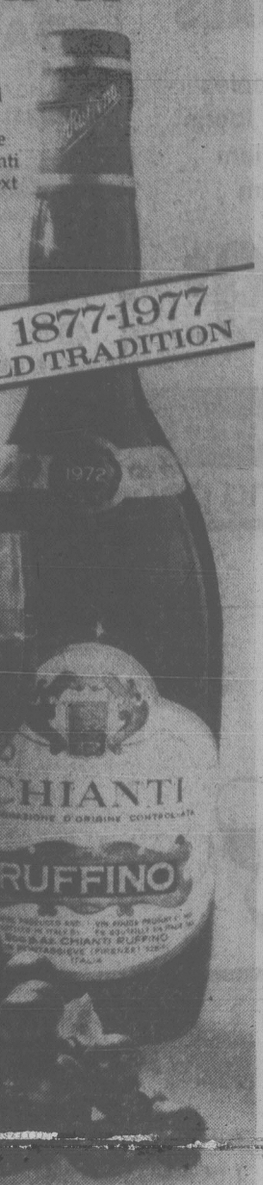

DARS staff will make presentations in 15 Greater Victoria schools Monday.

DARS staff will meet with the B.C. Association of Social Workers at the DARS office, 733 Johnson Street, Thursday evening.

A free film program will be offered by DARS Friday evening at the Eric Martin Institute.

Escape Ace Eyes Jump For Jackpot

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

IF Victoria magician Harry Herbert has his way, some day next summer he'll climb into a straitjacket, tie a parachute around his hips and leap out of a plane at 2,000 feet.

There are those who say Harry should be put in a straitjacket right now but Harry just shrugs.

He wanted to jump this summer, but couldn't find anyone willing to insure him.

Undaunted, he says he'll try again. He has his sights on the Abbotsford air show, or failing that the Canadian National Exhibition in Toronto.

Harry says he has it all figured out.

He'll have precisely 22 seconds to get out of the jacket and pull the rip cord.

The landing may be a bit tricky, coming down head first and all, but Harry says it's simply a matter of learning how to roll on impact.

For Harry, who has his own furniture repair business in the city and works as part-time w[illegible] the Gorge Hotel beer parlor, the trick is the ultimate test of his skills as an escape artist.

He realizes it may be the ultimate, period. But that's show biz.

Harry makes no bones about why he wants to do it.

"Money," he says quickly, without thinking.

There's fame too. No one has ever done it before.

The risk, however, is carefully calculated.

For years Harry has been in training. Each day begins with a half hour work out escaping from his straitjacket. His average time is 12 to 14 seconds. His best yet is nine and 8/100 of a second. The world record is nine seconds flat, held by a 28-year-old Florida man.

The same individual recently broke Harry's 21-second record for getting out of a straitjacket while suspended upside down. He did it in 19 seconds.

Harry is gunning again for both titles.

"Any rational thinking person can get out of a straitjacket," he says. "It's only a matter of practice."

HARRY, who is in his 40s — he won't tell his precise age but he admits to having three children, the oldest, 19 — says he's been intrigued with magic since he was a 12-year-old boy growing up in Sussex County in New Brunswick.

Shortly after coming to Victoria in 1960, he joined the Magic Circle, a select group of local magicians. To qualify for membership each person has to perform a trick. Harry's was to be tied up with 40 feet of rope from which he had to free himself within 40 seconds. Harry did it in 20 seconds.

Performing under the stage name Sebastian Mirakel, he's entertained thousands of kids and is a regular feature at Butchart Garden's summer program.

At the drop of a hat he'll display his talents. Clenching his left fist, he extracts a red silk handkerchief. He shoves it back in his hand. Presto, it's gone. He'll get you to tie his hands — "tighter, tighter," he urges — and then will ask you to drape his coat over his arms. "No, put it higher," he'll says reaching his hand out from under the coat.

The action catches you by surprise. You remove the coat. His hands are tied as before.

His repertoire includes card tricks, tricks of illusion, like sawing a woman in half — endwise — and tricks involving Indian Temple doves and rabbits.

Soft-spoken and articulate, he takes his craft seriously. Amid the clutter of his office which takes up the ground floor of a former Chinese laundry on Princess, is a collection of books on magic. He's studied the works of the Great Houdini, but has no pretensions of emulating him.

"In everything I do I want to do something completely different," he says, "something no one else has done before."

His aerial stunt with the straitjacket, however, is unquestionably the most hazardous he's attempted.

"It's something I'll only do once," he says. "I wouldn't want to tempt fate too much."

Police Like Longer Shifts

Victoria police o[illegible] have voted solidly in fa[illegible] of an experimental program that has them working longer shifts.

In a poll taken by the Victoria Police Union earlier this week 85 of 88 officers were in favor of continuing the 10 and 12-hour shift system now in place for a six month trial run.

The system was put into effect for six months to end Oct. 31 and the police board asked the union to gauge the response of officers to the new hours.

Under the system members of the traffic division work 10-hour shifts while members of the patrol division work 12-hour shifts.

A union spokesman said morale on the force is at an all-time high because of the new longer shifts.

Hard Look Taken At Harbor Planes

By MARK HUME
Times Staff

[illegible] Canada has launched a full review of air operations in Victoria harbor.

Regional superintendent of airways Don Mills said Wednesday Transport Canada studied the Inner Harbor two years ago and found the situation acceptable.

The second look has been prompted because of statements by civic officials.

"In light of some concerns that were expressed recently by your mayor and a couple of aldermen we thought we'd just take a good look at the situation," Mills said in an interview from his Vancouver office.

Following an AirWest Airlines Ltd. crash last month in Vancouver harbor that took the lives of 11 persons, Mayor Mike Young, Ald. Bill Tindall and Ald. Robin Blencoe voiced fears that Victoria might be headed for its own float plane accident.

Mills said he's sure the harbor is safe at present but that increasing numbers of float planes and surface traffic — especially pleasure boats — could lead to difficulties if not controlled.

"There's been an obvious increase in surface traffic this summer, what with all the new floats being built, and it's just someth[illegible]e have to take a look at."

Mills said that "I can only see more marine traffic in the future and . . . a small increase in (privately operated) float traffic with a larger increase in commercial float traffic."

Mills said one of the immediate results of the review will be the issuance of an aviation notice outlining approved arrival and departure paths and clearly describing the situation in the harbor. The notice would be given to all pilots flying into the area.

In a recent letter to Blencoe on the same subject, regional aviation safety officer D.A. Price said the review could lead to the possible elimination of private float plane operators from the harbor.

Mills agreed this is a possibility, saying: "The day is coming when there are some restrictions on the type of aircraft licencees. That day is coming, just don't ask me when."

Red Tide Skips Local Waters

Federal fisheries officer John Forgie said today there is no sign of poisonous red tide plankton in Victoria-area waters.

The plankton, which has resulted in most of Puget Sound in Washington State being closed to shellfish harvesting, can nauseate, paralyse and even kill.

Forgie said so far no trace has been found of the plankton, which contains a neurotoxin that affects the nervous system.

Dr. Ray Watkins, food program coordinator for the King County-Seattle Health Department, warned Wednesday: "It can cause nausea, partial paralysis and tingling in the lips for a few days or, in large quantities, death."

So far five victims have been reported, all in Snohomish County north of Seattle. Four of them required hospitalization.

There have been no deaths. Health officials call it one of the worst outbreaks of red tide in the state's history.

Shellfish ingest the toxin, and humans can become ill if they eat the shellfish. Crab are not affected, officials say.

The toxicity in the water around Whidbey Island measured 3,000 micrograms, said health department spokesman Jack Lilja. The acceptable level is 80 micrograms, he said.

Probe Asked On Contract

The owner of G.W.G. Rentals Ltd. said Wednesday there should be an RCMP investigation into the handling of a contract between the federal public works department and Wessex Construction Ltd. for work at the Ocean Sciences Institute.

Ed Gait said his firm, G.W.G. Rentals, is one of the sub-contractors on the Pat Bay Institute project which is going to suffer financially because Wessex, the general contractor, has gone bankrupt.

The Victoria company filed for bankruptcy in August leaving about 14 creditors and an outstanding debt on two jobs at the institute of about $133,000.

Gait wrote to federal Public Works Minister Judd Buchanan on Aug. 14 and was told in an Oct. 3 reply a preliminary analysis indicated the sub-trades would be paid 85 cents for every dollar they were owed.

However, Gait said Wednesday the minister is obviously uninformed on the matter because the sub-contractors were told at a bankruptcy hearing in Victoria Aug. 22 that they would be lucky to get 30 cents for every dollar.

To Gait that means that somewhere along the line the federal government's system for dealing with contractors was abused.

He said on most projects the government will give the contractor 85 per cent of his money only after he signs a declaration that all the sub-trades have been paid.

The remaining 15 per cent is held back until the project has been c[illegible]mpleted and all payments met, he said.

But because the government's holdback in this case is only enough to pay the sub-trades 30 cents on the dollar, Gait said it is obvious either someone has signed the declaration without paying the sub-trades or someone in the public works department was releasing money without such a declaration.

"There's something wrong," Gait said.

Gait said his company is only owed about $360 but it is the principle which concerns him.

He said it is particularly upsetting that something like this can happen on a government contract at a time when more contractors in the Victoria area than possibly anywhere else in the country are going bankrupt.

Victoria chartered accountat Peter Lloyd, appointed trustee for Wessex, was not available for comment.

BLAZE GUTS DORMITORY

Fire burned out a $150,000 dormitory building at Brentwood College Wednesday forcing the private school to arrange temporary accommodation for 60 students.

No one was injured in the blaze that broke out shortly before noon.

School officials said students were evacuated from the building without mishap.

The Mill Bay school announced it will begin repairs immediately and does not anticipate any problems in coping with the consequences of the fire.

Shots Reported On Sea Lions

Colwood RCMP are continuing an investigation into a report that Steller's sea lions resting on Race Rocks were shot at by a commercial fisherman.

School teacher Jack Hannam of Metchosin told police he was sports fishing near Race Rocks earlier this week when he saw a commercial boat pull in close to the rocks and fire on the sea lions.

Hannam said six rifle shots were fired from the boat's cabin.

Hannam said when he asked the skipper of the commercial craft what was going on the man replied he was "just killing some sea lions."

Police say they have located the commercial boat in question, but the investigation seems stalled because no proof has been found that any of the sea lions were hurt.

Property Taxes Won't Rise For Transit . . . If - Curtis

Property taxes in Greater Victoria won't be raised to finance urban transit if the system is run efficiently, Municipal Affairs Minister Hugh Curtis said Wednesday.

Curtis said property taxes will not increase to pay transit costs for at least five years and not even then if service and administration improves under the new Urban Transit Authority.

He said the Capital and the Greater Vancouver regional boards have been misleading the public by saying property owners will bear most of the costs of urban transit after 1981 because other financing methods are insufficient.

Under the cost-sharing formula worked out by the province, local governments will pay for their share of transit costs first by a gasoline tax of three cents a gallon, then by a B.C. Hydro surcharge on electricity bills and as a last resort by increased property taxes.

Capital Regional District chairman Jim Campbell said last week the first two stages of the financing formula will only cover spiralling transit costs until 1981. After that, property owners will foot most of the transit bill.

Curtis said those statements are based on data that is outdated and incomplete.

Revenues from the three-cent gasoline tax will meet transit costs for at least five years, he claimed. After that, the gas tax could be increased to five or even seven cents a gallon, he said.

Referendum Proposed To Help Buy Sidney Is.

By HUMPHRY DAVY
Times Staff

A referendum to raise money towards the purchase of Sidney Island for park use was proposed today by the executive director of the B.C. Sierra Club.

Bob Nixon of Victoria said the referendum should be confined to Victoria and Saanich Peninsula municipalities — the people who would benefit the most.

The 1,783-acre island, which has about 15 miles of shoreline, is for sale for $3.7 million by owner Jack Todd who has had private offers but would prefer the island become a park. The island is 18 miles north of Victoria and about three miles by water from the town of Sidney.

Nixon's proposal follows an announcement by the Southern Vancouver Island committee of the Outdoor Recreation Council that a campaign has been launched to have the island acquired either by the provincial or federal governments for use as a park.

Nixon thinks there's a better chance of getting senior governments to acquire the island if peninsula residents through their local goverments make a contribution towards its purchase.

"We would benefit most from this beautiful island," he said. "So we should take more than a passing interest in its future use."

He suggested if the municipalities raised between $700,000 and $1 million, it would be a major step towards buying the island.

Provincial and federal government agencies, plus private conservation organizations, would be asked for grants to complete the purchase, he said.

"The island is a major stopover and refuge for thousands of migratory waterfowl," he said. "Provincial and federal wildlife agencies, plus Ducks Unlimited, should be interested in making contributions towards preserving this aspect of the island."

Nixon pointed out that Sidney Island in the last 10 years has become a favorite recreation area for many people on the peninsula. They make great use of the 200-acre Sidney Spit marine park on the northern tip.

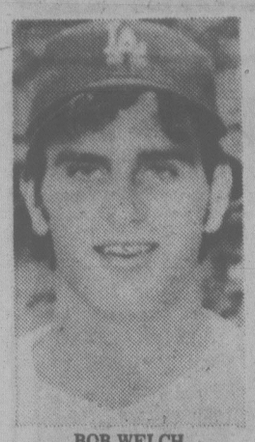

"The island will become an even more important recreational area as the population increases amd empty spaces on the Saanich Peninsula are filled with dwellings," he said.

He said for this reason peninsula residents should be asked if they are prepared to foot part of the bill.

"It's their only chance to acquire the island," he added. "Once it is sold to a developer, it will be too late to consider other alternatives."

He said the provincial government could use some of the money it receives from lotteries to pay a part of the purchase price.

BOB WELCH
the Dodger rookie . . .

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Rookie Bob Welch turned Mr. October into a pumpkin, tricking Reggie Jackson and treating Los Angeles Dodgers to a cozy two-game lead as baseball's 75th World Series now shifts to New York for the third game Friday night.

The Dodgers' stirring 4-3 victory Wednesday night gave them a 2-0 edge and only five teams in major league history have come back from that kind of deficit to win the best-of-seven series.

To a man, the Yankees think they can rise to the occasion. They hand the third-game ball to left-hander Ron Guidry, the best pitcher in baseball this year, and they know they have overcome worse adversity before.

"We've been down all year and fought back," said Yankees third baseman Graig Nettles, the main culprit in New York' slew of missed opportunities at the plate in the heart-breaking, second-game loss. "This is nothing new for us."

Right-hander Don Sutton, 2-0 in previous World Series decisions and 15-11 this season, admits he doesn't have Guidry's dominating power, but "on most game days, I give a pretty good accounting of myself."

For the defending champion Yankees to regain the winning touch, they need a typical Guidry effort and some hitting from somebody besides Jackson.

With starters Chris Chambliss, Mickey Rivers and Willie Randolph sidelined with injuries in the second game, the burden falls heavier on Nettles. He came through in the field, with two spectacular plays, but fell short at the plate, striking out feebly three times and leaving four New York runners on base—three of whom were in scoring position.

Jackson knocked in all three Yankees runs, and had a chance for more October heroics with two out and two on in the ninth.

Welch had just retired his first batter, Thurman Munson, when Jackson—the home run hero of last year's Series—strode to the plate. Welch fired nine fastballs, finally fanning the slugger on a 3-2 pitch after he had fouled four pitches off.

After striking out, Jackson tossed his bat in anger and stormed off the field, bumping into manager Bob Lemon in the dugout. Lemon turned around and pushed him back.

In the clubhouse, a subdued Jackson evaded the question of the pushing match with Lemon.

Asked about it, he said: "I can't tell you. I don't know. That's the way it goes."

He was, however, gracious about losing the one-on-one game with Welch.

"I didn't do the job," he said. "The man beat me fair and square. I'm not frustrated. I'm not angry. I'm not disappointed. I'm proud. I'm not gonna be down. I'm still a good player. He won. Give the man credit."

Dodgers manager Tom Lasorda gives Welch lots of credit.

"One of the big reasons for us winning the pennant was bringing up Bobby from the minors," he said. "We were 6½ games out when we called him up."

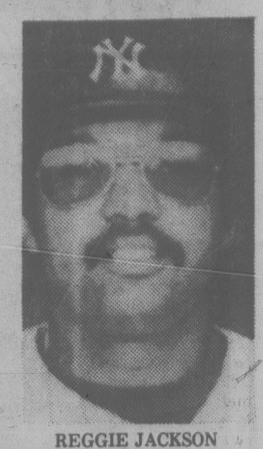

Facing Munson and Jackson with the tying and winning runs on base was quite a Series baptism, but Welch was not fazed.

"I just wanted to go after them and make them hit my pitch," said Welch. "That's why I went after them with my fastball."

Ron Cey's three-run homer off Catfish Hunter in the sixth was the key blow for the Dodgers, who now have hit at least one homer in their last seven Series games.

One report, incredibly, has Lemon only being voted a half-share by the players at a recent team meeting.

"I didn't attend the meeting," said Yankees outfielder Lou Piniella. "But I understand they voted Lem a half share. That's fair, isn't it?"

Late Goals Hurt

LETHBRIDGE — Two late goals by Earl Ingarfield gave Lethbridge Broncos a come-from-behind 6-5 win over Victoria Cougars in a see-saw Western Hockey League game Wednesday.

Cougar captain Geordie Robertson had given the Cougars a 5-4 lead with less than seven minutes remaining in the contest against the Broncos, who are now coached by former Victoria owner-manager-coach Pat Ginnell.

The clubs were deadlocked 1-1 after one period and 3-3 after 40 minutes. Robertson scored at 11:25 of the third to tie the game and again at 13:45 to move the Cougars ahead 5-4.

And then Ingarfield turned things around.

He connected for his first marker at 19:09 returned to the ice to score the winner at 19:38.

Greg Adams, Brad Palmer and Bob Jansch accounted for the other Victoria goals.

Cougars outshot the Broncos 32-30 and took four of 11 minor penalties. The clubs split four majors.

The loss left Cougars tied with New Westminster Bruins for second place in the Western Division — each with a 3-2 record — three points behind leading Portland Winter Hawks.

Cougars continue their eight-game road trip tonight by facing Tigers in Medicine Hat and then have two days off before meeting Wheat Kings in Brandon.

In another league development, Bruins sent defenceman Jim Crossan to Calgary Wranglers in a trade for Stewart Orpen.

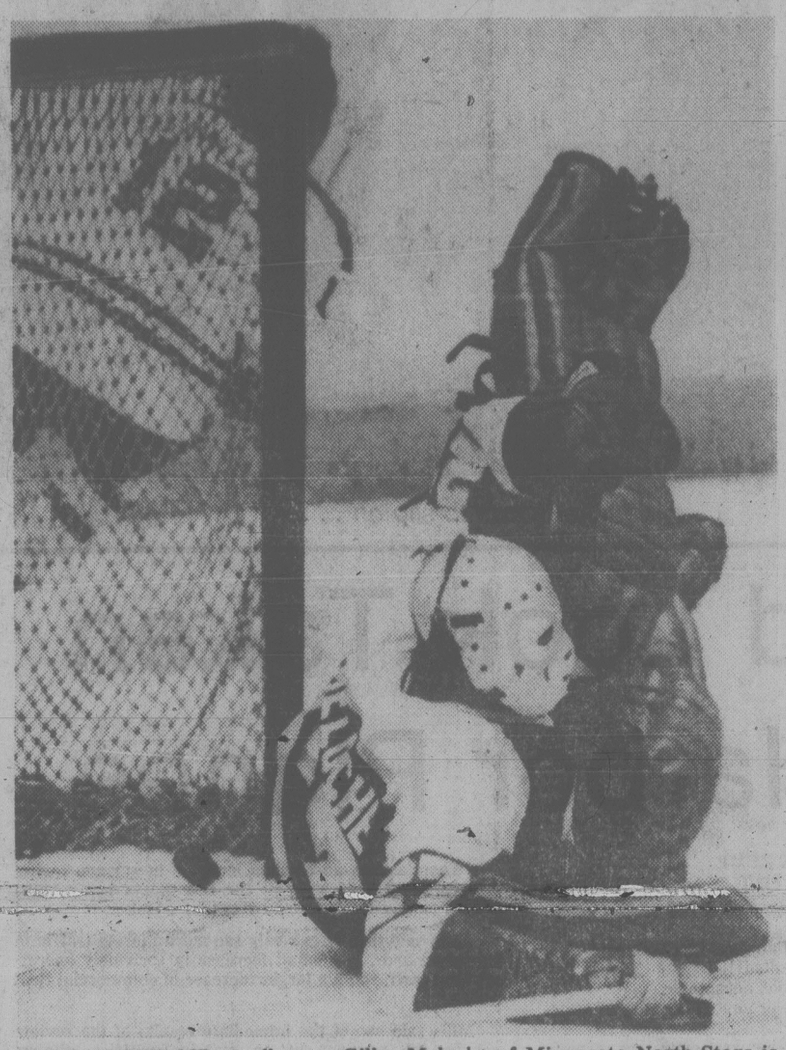

Ernie McLean, coach of the Bruins, said Orpen, a 16-year-old defenceman, would be assigned to Revelstoke Bruins of the British Columbia Junior Hockey League.

Also assigned to Revelstoke, a New Westminster farm team, was right winger Stewart Robertson, who played in Revelstoke last season.

McLean also said that right winger Ralph Kreuger had been released by the WHL team.

New Westminster has won three of five games this season. The Bruins have won the Memorial Cup for the major junior hockey championship of Canada the last two seasons.

Aussies Boost Lead; Canada Share Second

PACIFIC HARBOUR, Fiji (Reuter) — Australia increased its lead to six strokes in the team section of the women's world amateur golf championships today while Canada retained a share of second place after three rounds of the 72-hole tournament.

The Australians had a three-round total of 443, the combination of the best two scores each day by the three-woman team.

The Canadian team of Cathy Sherk of Fonthill, Ont., Marilyn Palmer of Vancouver and Stacey West of Thornhill, Ont., were at 449, sharing second spot with the United States and Britain-Ireland.

Jane Lock of Australia and Beth Daniel of the U.S. shared the individual lead with 220 totals.

Stiff winds made playing conditions more difficult than on the first two days and no one broke par 72 on the Pacific Harbour Golf and Country Club layout. The best score of the day was a par by Charlotte Montgomery, representing Sweden.

Sherk, who won her second Canadian amateur championship this year as well as the U.S. amateur and U.S. North-South titles, slipped to a 76 today for a 222 total, two strokes behind the leaders in the individual standings.

Daniel, who had a one-under-par 71 on Wednesday, shot a 74 today to join Lock at 220. The Australian shot a 75.

One stroke behind Sherk at 223 were Montgomery and C. Kingham of New Zealand.

West, who shot 80 the first two days, today contributed to the Canadian team score with a 77. Palmer, who had 75 the first two days, today shot an 80.

Noted Trainer Faces Charges

NICE, France (Reuter) — Pierre-Desire Allaire, a top figure in the French trotting world who trained and drove horses owned by film stars and pop singers, was charged Wednesday with swindling and infringing gambling laws, his lawyer said.

Police sources also said other leading trainers were being questioned in connection with allegations of race-fixing at Riviera tracks, particularly at nearby Cagnes-sur-Mer.

Royals Tie Vikes

Rudi Kuebler scored both goals to give Cosmopolitan Royals a 2-2 tie with University of Victoria Vikings on Wednesday night in a first division match of the Vancouver Island Soccer League at Royal Athletic Park.

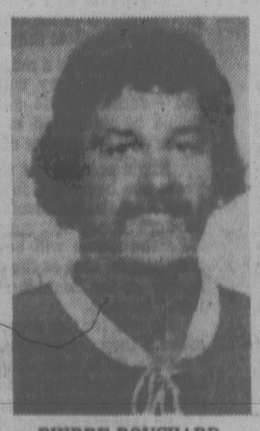

Kuebler opened scoring in the first minute of play and then gave Royals their third successive tie by connecting again 15 minutes into the second half.

Vikings had gone ahead near the end of the first half on goals by Jim Palm and Peter Zachary.

Victoria Athletics lead the division with a 3-0 record while Victoria West and Nanaimo United are tied for second with five points each.

Bouchard Deal Nixed; Null and Void: Ziegler

PIERRE BOUCHARD
. . . still with Capitals

MONTREAL (CP) — John Ziegler, president of the National Hockey League, Wednesday declared null and void the trade which returned defenceman Pierre Bouchard to Montreal Canadiens from Washington Capitals after the waiver draft on Monday.

Bouchard was claimed by the Capitals as the first choice in the draft on Monday and the Capitals attempted to return him to the Canadiens in exchange for forward Rodney Schutt.

"The bylaws of the NHL prohibit the transfer of a player claimed in the waiver draft without that player first being offered on waivers," Ziegler said Wednesday night.

"I have declared the transfer null and void because of that.

Al MacNeil, director of player personnel for the Canadiens, said he did not know what Montreal would do to settle Schutt's situation.

"We thought we'd made a legal trade because the draft was over," MacNeil said.

"I don't know what we're going to do about Schutt—that's up to Irving Grundman," MacNeil said.

Spectrum Assumes First Place

Spectrum took over first place in the Greater Victoria High School Boys' Soccer League on Wednesday with a 2-1 victory over visiting Claremont Spartans.

Mike McGregor had scored for Spartans earlier in the half to offset a first-half tally by Spectrum's Mike Kadar.

In an off-field development the same day, a meeting of league officials decided that a match scheduled between Victoria High Tyees and Mt. Douglas Thistles on Sept. 22 will be played Oct. 19 at Mt. Douglas. The match, which wasn't played because of a mixup between the coaches, had been awarded to the Thistles.

Canuck Rookies Come Out Firing

By The Canadian Press

Have Vancouver Canucks found the needed scoring punch? How long will Montreal Canadiens remain unbeaten? Are Toronto Maple Leafs for real?

Will Bobby Orr's knee hold up?

These and other questions will be answered in May, for the National Hockey League season began Wednesday night.

Vancouver started in fine fashion by winning its opener at home, 8-2 over Colorado Rockies. Montreal also won its opener at home, 5-2 over Minnesota North Stars. Toronto won on the road, 3-2 against Pittsburgh Penguins. Washington Capitals beat Los Angeles Kings 4-2 on the West Coast. Atlanta Flames and Chicago Black Hawks tied 4-4, while St. Louis Blues edged Detroit Red Wings 5-4.

Games tonight have Philadelphia Flyers in New York to take on the Rangers, Buffalo Sabres playing host to New York Islanders and Pittsburgh travelling to Boston to play the Bruins.

Have the Canucks found the scoring punch lacking in past years?

Gradin, an aquisition from Sweden, scored two goals and assisted on another. Fraser scored once and also gained an assist. Smyl, former captain of Memorial Cup champion New Westminster Bruins, displayed aggressive body checking and added one assist.

Ron Delorme and Joe Contini replied for Colorado.

How long will Montreal remain unbeaten this year?

Minnesota coach Harry Howell said he felt the North Stars will be a tougher team to face as the season progresses.

"After we got over the first period, I think we played very well," Howell said. "I'm impressed with the way the team played over-all. It's going to take a while."

Is the tough image Toronto is developing for real?

"We were really tough along the boards tonight," said Leafs coach Roger Neilson after their victory over Pittsburgh. "Every winger you can name on our team made good, solid hits."

Darryl Sittler led the Leafs with two goals and Walt McKechnie netted the winner in the second period with an assist to Ron Ellis. Ron Stackhouse and Jacques Cossette scored for Pittsburgh.

Will Bobby Orr's knee last the season?

Orr, who had not played in a regular NHL game since he took the ice for the Hawks on Jan. 27, 1977, played Wednesday in Chicago's draw with Atlanta and had mixed feelings about his performance.

"The groin injury has healed 100 per cent and my knee doesn't bother me at all," he said. "I came out all right and we played against the biggest team in the NHL. I will admit, however, I did things out there tonight I shouldn't have done and I don't figure to repeat them too often."

Mickey And Friend Take a Cab

LOS ANGELES (AP) — New York centre fielder Mickey Rivers was involved in a disturbance on the Yankees' team bus Wednesday night en route to Dodgers Stadium.

Rivers apparently attempted to get a friend on the bus and became involved in a shouting match with team travelling secretary Bill Kane.

Rivers stormed off the bus and took a taxi to the stadium with his friend. He did not play in the game won by the Dodgers, 4-3.

Yankee manager Bob Lemon said: "It was a misinterpretation of the rules on who rode the team bus. There was no fight.

"There was no real trouble . . . and I would also like to say something about the questions I've been getting about curfew problems. Nobody ever misses our curfews because we don't have any."

Wilson Joins Cincinnati

CINCINNATI (AP) — Winless Cincinnati Bengals of the National Football League announced Wednesday they have activated 280-pound tackle Mike Wilson, formerly with Toronto Argonauts of the Canadian Football League.

Wilson, a Bengals fourth-round NFL draft choice in 1977, was released by Toronto following an early season injury.

LANDRY SR. DIES

MISSION, Texas (AP) — Ray Landry, father of Dallas Cowboys coach Tom Landry, died Tuesday night after suffering a heart attack. He was 78.

City Girls on Canada Team

Pitcher Rosemary Fuller, catcher Joanne Mick and outfielder Donna Blackstock, all of Victoria, are included on the 19-member roster of Canada's entry in the world women's softball championship tournament starting Friday in San Salvador.

The trio, plus nine clubmates from the national champion New Westminster Doc's Blues, will form the nucleus of the national squad, which will be coached by Adrian Lavigne and Alastair MacLeod, both of the Blues.

Canada, which finished seventh in the 1974 world tourney, is one of a record 16 teams competing and has been drawn into a division with Australia, Holland, Virgin Islands, Zambia, Guatemala, El Salvador and Puerto Rico. Included in the other division are the United States, New Zealand, Taiwan, Bahamas, Panama, Italy, Belize and Nicaragua.

Why Nanaimo Is Doing Well

max low

How typical!

There I was putting a jinx on a team that was doing very well thank you, before I inquired.

Still, it was only part of a jinx. All is not lost.

"Why are you doing so well?" I asked veteran playing-coach Ray Telford of his mainly young Nanaimo United side.

He was sitting on the bench on the far side of Royal Athletic Park nursing a torn ligament in his left knee (injured in a game at Powell River two weeks earlier) and watching his team tackle Oak Bay in a Vancouver Island Soccer League Premier Division game.

And he didn't have an answer. Not straight away, at least.

"It's surprised everybody, really, including us," Ray said with a grin.

Surprise, certainly is the operative word. For underdog Nanaimo United's is already the success story of the 1978-79 soccer season.

Formed four years ago in a breakaway move from the more powerful Nanaimo City Club, United acquired Telford (also from City) as playing-coach last season and captured the Island's Second Division title.

That earned the squad promotion to the elite Premier Division where, quite frankly, it expected to be overpowered on each outing.

"We intended just to keep our nose in the door and, hopefully, avoid relegation," said Ray. "We thought if we went up and back down (the bottom two clubs at the end of the season go into the Second Division and the top two from there move up) in the same season it wouldn't accomplish anything.

"And so we thought we'd be happy if we finished third from last and managed to stay in the top division," he explained.

But instead of a nose in the door, United players have barged right in, knocking the others out of the way.

Before Saturday, they'd played five games and won all five. They were in a tie for top spot and just over a week ago beat defending-champ Vic West, 2-0, in the final to become the first up-Island team ever to win the McGavin Cup.

That was before Saturday.

Though Ray didn't want to play with his bad knee, he went on in the second half and scored a goal to aid the cause but Nanaimo was held to a 2-2 tie by Oak Bay. Still, that's six games in a row undefeated and now in a tie for second place (as Victoria Athletics won Sunday to take over top berth). And that's not bad for a club just up from the Second Division.

"It's not that we have a super talented team," Ray said searching for an answer to success. "We don't. We only have three or four experienced players and five just up from juvenile ranks — Perry Logan and Mark Hurworth, both 17, and 18-year-olds Mark Spees, Wayne Markham and Murray Carver."

But Ray admitted he concentrates heavily on fitness and that makes up for what they don't have elsewhere.

"If you can at least run with the opposition, then you have a chance of winning," he explained. "And I tell them to forget the past; forget last weekend's game; forget that on Wednesday we won the McGavin Cup; and think only about the game we're in now."

RAY TELFORD
... new chance for players

Nanaimo United was set up originally as a farm team of Nanaimo City, which was supposed to get the best players and have the strongest team.

"But there was some bad feeling so United broke away altogether," Ray said.

For Ray Telford, who last played for Canada in the 1976 Olympics in Montreal, the performance of his United squad is exciting.

"I'll be 32 next month and I'm running out of playing time," he said. "So naturally, I want to play in the best level of soccer I can."

Poor old Nanaimo City, though, hasn't been doing too well without Ray and one or two of the others. City bowed out, 5-0, to Vic West in the McGavin Cup and was blasted, 7-1, by Athletics a couple of weeks ago.

Long-time Vancouver Island Soccer League president Doug Day thinks that in Nanaimo they're all a little crazy.

"Why have two teams in the same division?" he asked me. "It's just madness. United is not a bad team but City has only two or three good players and the rest are mediocre. If they combined the two squads they'd have one super team."

But Ray Telford sees it differently.

For the most part, his United squad was born from players spurned by the then stronger Nanaimo City. Apart from himself and a couple of others, his team was made up of players left on the sidelines when City used to play each weekend.

They have been given a new chance and have responded to it together.

And to Ray, this is what is more important.

Perhaps, too, it is this chance and the response that is the answer to success.

Saanich Lacrosse

The annual general meeting of the Saanich Minor Lacrosse Association will be held in the Red Barn at Lambrick Park Oct. 15, starting at 7:30 p.m.

Association officials are issuing a special plea for parents and would-be executives to attend the meeting.

Button Golf Tie

Cliff Soberg and George Barnes of Cedar Hill battled Bert Davies and Gordon Perry of Glen Meadows to a tie Wednesday in a seniors golf buttons match at Uplands. A rematch has been scheduled for Oct. 18.

"His bark's a lot worse than his bite."

Island Lacrosse Awards Night

Yugoslavs Trip Brazil

MANILA (Reuter) — Yugoslavia virtually assured itself of a place in the final of the men's world basketball championship beating previously undefeated Brazil, 91-87, in the semi-final round Wednesday night.

It was the sixth win in as many games for the Yugoslavs, runners-up to the Soviet Union in the last tournament in Puerto Rico, and the first defeat for Brazil in the eight-team semi-final round.

In other semi-final matchs Wednesday, the Soviet Union defeated Italy 79-69 and Australia beat the Philippines, 97-52.

The Russians, who went down 105-92 to the Yugoslavs earlier, displayed championship form against the Italians, who upset the United States 80-80 this week.

Yugoslavia's victory in an action-packed game played before 4,000 at the Rizal Stadium was in doubt until the dying seconds.

IS YOUR CAR'S TIMING CHEATING YOU OF MILEAGE?

A TANK OF ESSO EXTRA PREMIUM UNLEADED AND A $5.95* TIMING CHECK AND RE-SET WILL TELL YOU.

YOU COULD IMPROVE YOUR MILEAGE BY UP TO 5%.

A lot of cars that run on unleaded gas may also have their timing retarded. In fact, our survey shows that 1 out of 7 have their timing retarded an average of 4.6 degrees. This might get rid of engine knock but it also cuts down on fuel economy. And this could be the story on your car without you even realizing it. For $5.95, your participating Esso dealer can check and reset your engine's timing back to manufacturer's specifications. Then, you can fill up with Esso Extra Premium Unleaded and get the full benefit of this new high octane gasoline.

EXACTLY, WHAT IS TIMING?

Timing controls the exact moment when the spark plug ignites the fuel/air mixture inside the cylinders. If the spark comes too early or too late, you don't get full value from the gasoline you're using and you get less than full performance.

TIMING WILL ALSO AFFECT ENGINE KNOCK AND RUN-ON.

If your timing is off, you notice that premature or delayed ignition as a knock or pinging sound. It's especially noticeable on acceleration or going uphill.

Incomplete combustion which may also be caused by incorrect timing and/or gasoline, results in deposit build-up inside the cylinder and that leads to engine run-on after you shut off the ignition.

ASK YOUR PARTICIPATING ESSO DEALER.

If you are one of the thousands of Canadian motorists who have been having trouble with knock, run-on or poor mileage on your late model car, talk to your participating Esso dealer.
It could well be that your timing is off and that your car really needs a higher octane unleaded gasoline.
It's certainly worth $5.95 for the timing check and re-set to find out.
And a couple of tankfuls of new Esso Extra Premium Unleaded should prove that you're getting improved mileage and smoother performance.
We know that's what you want from your car. And your participating Esso dealer can help you get it. *Or less. (Most cars until November 30, 1978.)

Shutout for Flyers

CHEMAINUS — Fuller Lake Flyers, led by a four-goal performance from Keith Mazerenko, romped to a 12-0 shutout over Kerry Park Islanders in a South Vancouver Island Junior "B" Hockey League game Wednesday at Fuller Lake Arena.

The win evened the Fuller Lake record at 2-2 and moved them to within two points of second-place Esquimalt Legion Blues.

Greg Hollett and Brett Malli added three goals each for Flyers, who scored six times in the second period, while singles were fired by Don Bodger and George Chadwick.

Hiking Mishap

HONOLULU (AP) — The 27-year-old wife of former major league baseball player Willie Davis died last week in a hiking accident. Police said Amy Davis fell about 13 metres from the top of a waterfall to its base in a forest area about 10 kilometres from Honolul.

Brown Scores Two For A's

Graham Brown hammered in his second goal of the game with a little less than two minutes remaining Wednesday night to give Victoria Athletics a 7-6 decision over Esquimalt Maple Leafs in South Island Big Six Intermediate Hockey League action Wednesday at Esquimalt Sports Centre.

In another game, Western Homes Buckaroos and Juan de Fuca Merchants played to a 3-3 deadlock at Juan de Fuca Arena.

Bruce Cowick also scored twice for the Athletics, including the tying 6-6 goal at 15:47 of the third period, while singles were added by Mark Bowles, Gord Neilson and Brian Hamilton. Chris Riddell (3), Dale Cook, Randy Krantz and Rick Adams replied for Leafs, who were down 3-2 after the first period but came back to tie it up 5-5 going into the final frame.

At Juan de Fuca, rookie Stan Alstad scored twice to lead the Buckaroos while Bill Pettinger added the single. Cam Kring set the pace for Merchants with a two-goal performance and Tom Wilson fired the single.

Buckaroos are now 2-0-1, Athletics are 2-1, Leafs 1-3 and Merchants, 0-1-1

200 Years Of Coal In Canada

VANCOUVER (CP) — Canada has about 200 years of coal reserves at the present rate of use, compared with about 300 years of reserves in Britain, Britain's undersecretary of state for energy said Tuesday.

"Canadian sources have worked out the 200-year figure. It is a priceless asset," said Alex Eadie in an interview during a conference on coal research.

He noted that conversion of coal into natural gas and the manufacture of synthetic gasoline and oil from coal are techniques that are already practical.

"In Britain, we are getting ready to use this existing knowledge in preparation for the time when North Sea oil and gas run out," he said. "In the early 1980s, Britain will be self-sufficient in energy needs but as North Sea resources diminish we will very likely see coal refineries coming into operation."

A coal refinery is a plant that will make natural gas, gasoline and oil from coal.

"You have to remember that much of the technology for a coal refinery is already well established in the form of a conventional oil refinery. Where it will differ is that instead of crude oil being delivered to the refinery, coal will come in."

He also called for more pooling of research efforts.

"The amount of money needed to bring coal conversion technology to the market place will amount to billions of dollars across the world. Because of this enormous expense, we shall need to pool our efforts on research, development and demonstration."

Britain has already started work on two pilot plants, at a cost of about $65 million, to liquefy coal into synthetic oil.

Rafuse Sane: Psychiatrists

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — Three of the four psychiatrists who examined accused murderer Russel Raymond Rafuse testified in British Columbia Supreme Court Wednesday that he is sane.

Rafuse, 21, of Burnaby, has confessed that he killed his older brother's girlfriend Sept. 25, 1977.

Virginia Alice Sjoberg, 24, was found dead in her apartment bedroom. She had been stabbed 19 times, slashed and beaten.

Two psychiatrists testified that Rafuse probably was in "an altered state of consciousness" while he was stabbing Ms. Sjoberg but he was not insane as defined by the Criminal Code of Canada.

Suspension Lifted

VANCOUVER (CP) — A member of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, Local 213, says he has won his battle to overturn a 15-year suspension from participating in union affairs.

Terry Simpson said he was exonerated by an overwhelming vote at the IBEW's international convention last week in Atlantic City, N.J.

Simpson was among nine members suspended following a two-day work stoppage at the Pacific Centre construction site here in April, 1975.

The charges made against the nine by Local 213 business manager Cliff Rundgren included slandering other members, advocating or causing work stoppages, usurping responsibilities of leaders and failing to follow rules and procedures for resolving differences.

Chemical Committee

VANCOUVER (CP) — About 100 civic and senior government officials agreed at a meeting Wednesday that a fully co-ordinated approach is needed for the transport of dangerous chemicals in the city.

The officials — including local mayors and company and provincial and federal government representatives — agreed to form a committee to co-ordinate plans for dealing with emergencies such as the recent chlorine gas spill here which injured at least 78 people.

A very special automotive achievement.

You'll be glad you waited for these cars. Sophisticated, distinctive, noticeably new inside and out. Efficiently new in size and fuel economy, yet with a commanding presence that says: "This is very special!" Even the outside rearview mirrors are a sleek new design.

Come inside. To the comfort of a living room. To elegant appointments and such luxuries as power door locks, tinted glass all around, thick shag carpeting underfoot. To every inch and more the headroom and legroom of last year's models. Driver's controls are newly, sensibly grouped on the steering column. Chimes gently remind you to fasten your seat belt.

Now take to the road. For a firm, thoroughly responsive ride. A revolutionary Chrysler achievement in driving smoothness, and quiet. (This is the quietest Chrysler ever built.) And if you're going far, there's more than 21 cubic feet of usable carpeted trunk space. Complete with new, ready-to-use compact spare.

Chrysler 1979 is very special. And can be made specially yours with such desirable options as newly designed all-season temperature control, and concert hall 4-speaker Stereo.

Come see, touch, drive. Let Chrysler take your breath away.

AIRPORT REOPENING FAVORED

DELTA (CP) — Council in this municipality has voted in favor of reopening the Boundary Bay airport, but it wants the federal government to pay all costs involved.

Transport Canada has proposed the airport be used for planes up to 5,000 kilograms, to relieve air traffic at Vancouver International Airport.

Costs of reopening the airport were estimated at more than $6 million for airport development and at least $1.15 million for servicing.

Wrong Kind of Grapes Spoiling the Wine

Too many grapes of the wrong kind and consumers who remain unconvinced about quality are the biggest problems facing B.C.'s wine industry, a report by the legislature's standing committee on agriculture shows.

The committee said there now are six wineries in the province using grapes grown in the Okanagan.

"In B.C. the major challenge facing the wineries concerns the need to convince the consumer that locally produced, high quality wines are an attractive alternative to the imported product," the committee found.

However, it said that production problems have taken their toll in the battle to promote B.C. wines.

The report notes that the total time to start experimental vine cuttings, produce a harvestable crop and make the wine takes between nine and 16 years.

"Only two per cent of the wine-grape acreage in B.C. has been planted with European vinifera grapes — most of the remainder are European hybrid grapes which are not yet capable of producing premium quality wines," it said.

The report said B.C.'s failure to meet the demand for certain grape varieties and recent over-production of undesirable hybrid varieties can be linked to two factors from the past.

These are "a rapidly expanding unsophisticated wine market which absorbed B.C.'s grape production regardless of quality" and high prices paid for grapes due to buoyant demand.

"Grower criteria for plantings were winter hardiness and yield rather than quality for wine-making," the committee found.

It also said that local wineries blame the B.C. grape marketing board, formed in 1970, for the variety imbalance and over-production which occured.

The committee said quality problems have occured because of import quotas on superior quality American grapes, imposed in support of growers' appeals, and licensing regulations requiring purchase of grapes from low-quality as well as high-quality producers.

Mediation Sought At Newspapers

VANCOUVER (CP) — Six newspaper unions have applied for government mediation to break an early stalemate in negotiations with Pacific Press Ltd., which prints the Sun and Province newspapers.

Phil Needham, co-chairman of the joint council of press unions, said Wednesday that each union has filed separate applications with the goverment mediation branch.

The unions are the Vancouver-New Westminster Newspaper Guild, Printing Pressmen, Wholesale Drivers, mailers, printers and Graphic Arts Union.

Needham said talks between the guild and company adjourned indefinitely Friday when disagreement occurred over management proposals on exclusions from his union's bargaining unit.

No talks have been scheduled for the other unions since the pressmen decided to conduct a strike vote last Friday.

Union contracts expire Oct. 31.

Marion Trial: 'I Am Certain I Won't Be Only One Killed'

MONTREAL (CP) — In spite of numerous objections from the defence on points of law, two cassette tape recordings that accompanied written communiques from the alleged kidnappers of Charles Marion were allowed into evidence Wednesday in the trial of Claude and Jeanne Valence.

The Valences are charged with conspiring to kidnap the Sherbrooke credit union employee, with actually kidnapping Marion, forcibly detaining him for 82 days, attempted extortion and extortion.

The recordings were played over courtroom loudspeakers and terminated with a voice repeating the name Charles Marion seven times.

The voice on the first tape said it was recorded Sept. 16, 1977, at "an unknown place." The second tape was allegedly recorded Sept. 21, 46 days after Marion's disappearance.

Alleged communiques already in evidence have indicated lengthy and complex negotiations between the kidnappers and credit union officials over the ransom and exchange procedures.

In the first tape a voice says: "I had great hopes — now I am disappointed. I don't know exactly what I can hold on to."

The voice asked authorities to give the kidnappers the time they requested — 1½ to three hours from the time the $500,000 ransom was to be dropped off to the time Marion would be released.

"I have a great deal of confidence in my kidnappers," the voice said. "They assure me that they'll keep me alive if you act as they have requested."

The voice explained that the kidnappers had no reason to kill their hostage who had been forced to wear a pillow case over his head at all times except when snapshots were taken of him. At those times, the kidnappers wore hoods.

The second tape began: "My dear friends, to you my dear wife, my children, Pierre, my Roseline, I love you so much — I want to see you again . . .

"I am certain I won't be the only one killed in the province if plans aren't carried out as they should be . . .

"They are asking me to stop the taping and record my name."

Charles Marion was repeated seven times.

The recordings were entered as evidence as provincial police technical expert Cpl. Yvon Desbiens read through the communiques that had been given to him to authenticate during Marion's disappearence from Aug. 6 to Oct. 27 of last year.

When the Quebec Superior Court hearing was adjourned Wednesday, 18 of the messages from the presumed kidnappers and numerous accompanying letters and photographs had been placed before the jury.

As were many of the communiques, the 15th was signed seven times "Charles Marion" and once by the "6 black serpents."

NUTRITION EDUCATION CENTRE ADVOCATED

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada needs a national nutrition education centre to deal with the problems of overnourished Canadians, says a business professor at University of Western Ontario.

At a nutrition education conference in Ottawa today, John Quelch said there is little doubt that most Canadians want and need more information on nutrition.

He said attention is being increasingly devoted to the problems of overnutrition as well as problems of malnutrition.

Quelch said nutrition education was as important as preventive, diagnostic and therapeutic programs.

A national nutrition education centre could co-ordinate the knowledge and efforts of nutrition experts and organizations.

Quelch said the centre he envisages would be a semi-autonomous public agency funded jointly by government and industry and administered by a board representing all groups that have "a stake and an interest in the future of nutrition education in this country."

A text of his speech was released in advance.

OTTAWA (CP) — Government-sponsored advertisements promoting products such as eggs and butter should be allowed to play by the same rules as those promoting soft drinks and margarine, Dr. Keith Murray, head of the federal nutritional sciences bureau, said Wednesday.

Inasmuch as some government departments represent food producers and manufacturers, they must use marketing policies to support those producers, he said at a conference on nutrition education.

"Some people view the coincidental promotion of butter and the program to promote the consumption of less fat as a classic example of the right foot of government not knowing what the left is doing," Dr. Murray said. "In my view, this is not the case."

The agriculture department and farmers are spending $4 million to get people to spread more butter; a health department nutrition campaign is urging consumers to reduce their fat intake because of the link between animal fats and heart disease.

The Canadian dairy commission says butter consumption has dropped more than 30 per cent in the last eight years while margarine use has increased.

Said Dr. Murray: "Recommendations to eat less of something (butter) should not preclude the promotion of a legitimate part of the diet. If the public can't sort out the two messages . . . then we are, indeed, in trouble."

CPP Holdings Listed

OTTAWA (CP) — The government invested $437,379,000 of Canada Pension Plan funds in provincial and federal securities in the third quarter of 1978, Finance Minister Jean Chretien said Wednesday.

The comparative figure for the same quarter of 1977 was $413,422,000.

Funds received by the plan but not required to meet expenses and benefit payments during the following three months are invested in securities.

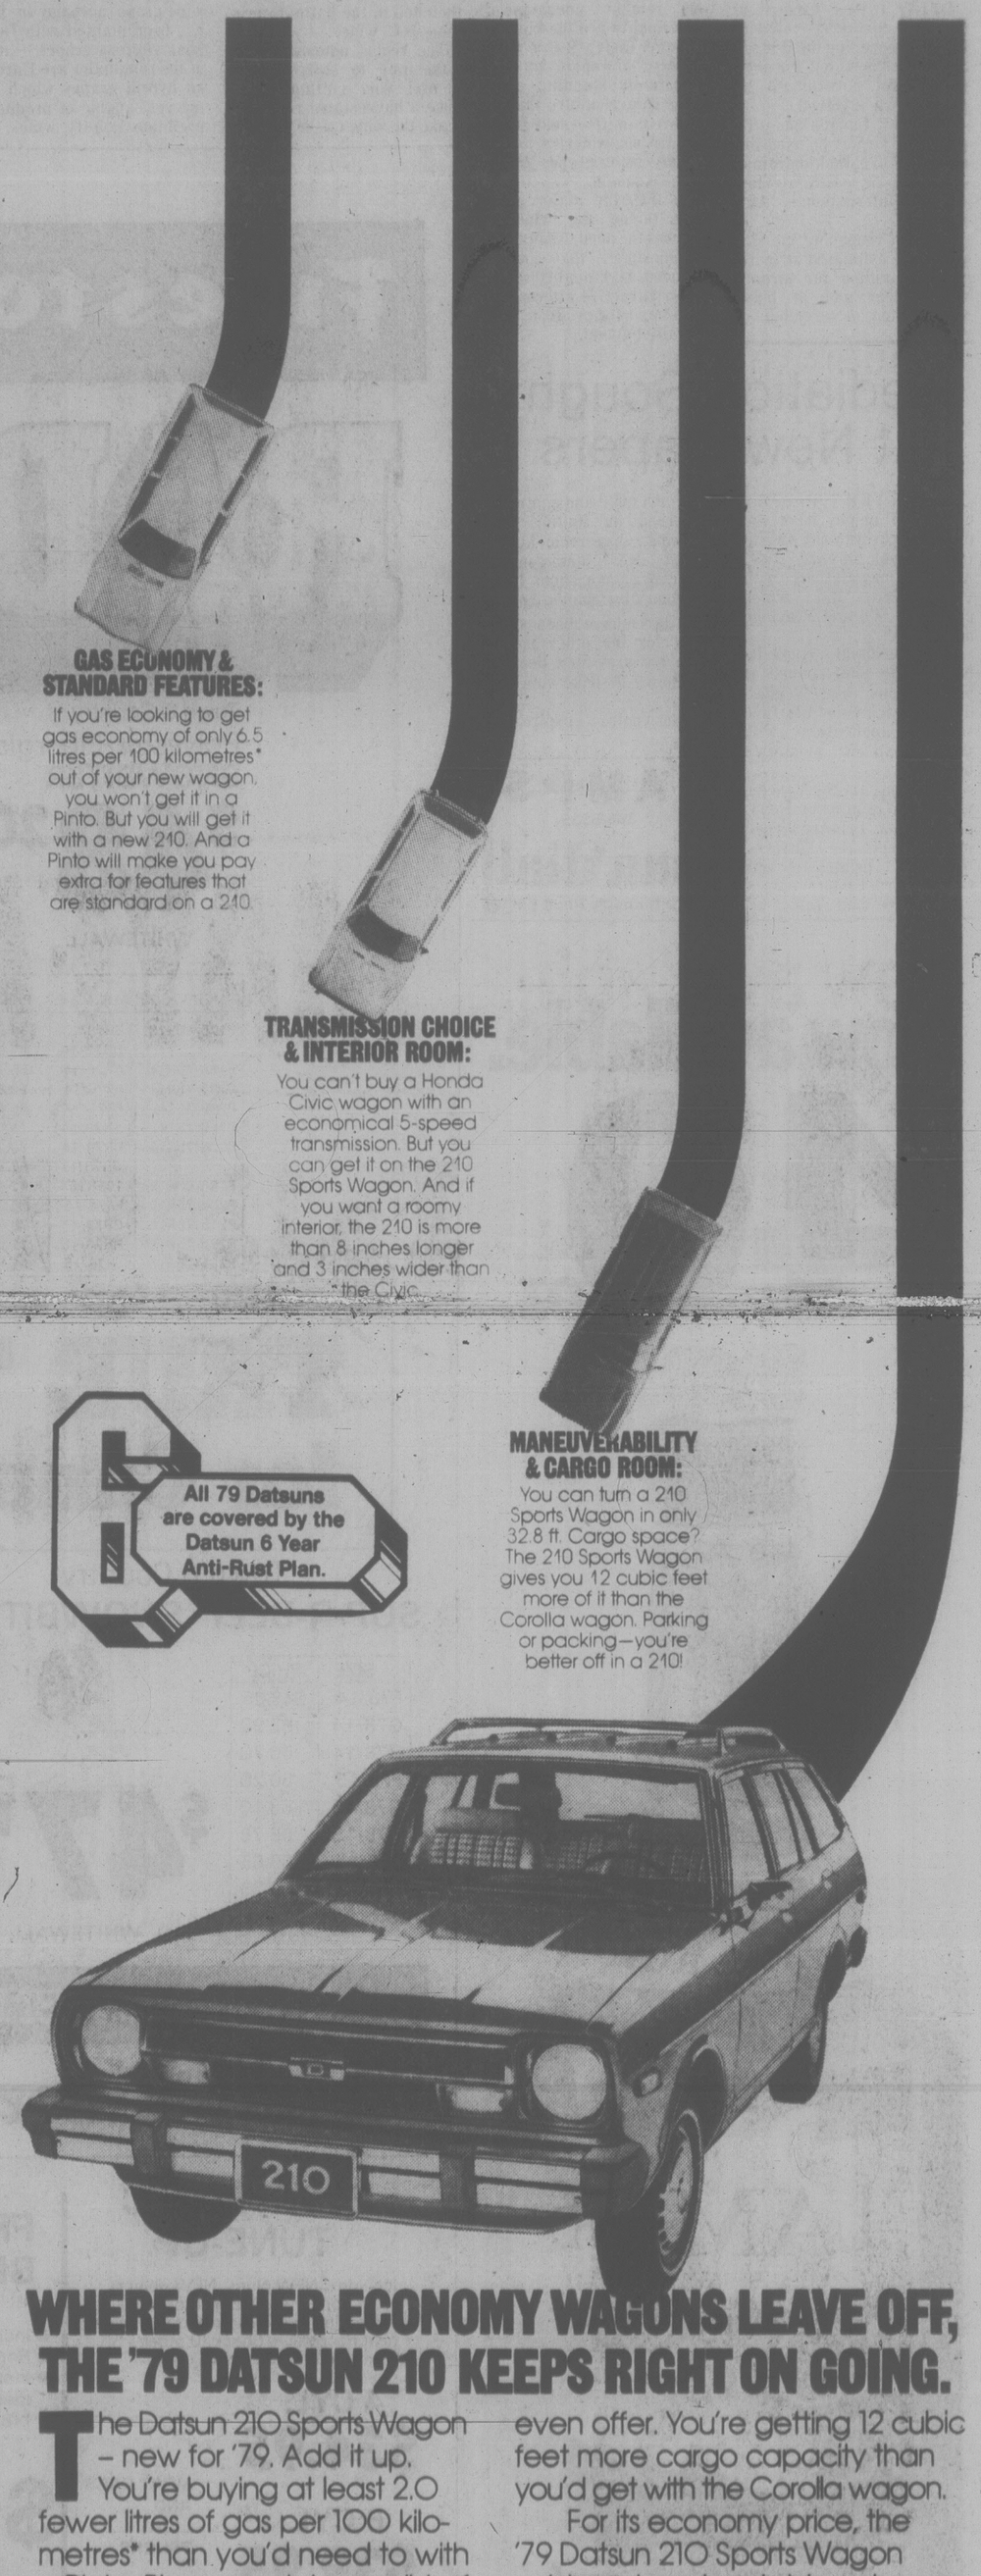

In Quebec, which has its own parallel pension plan, only funds of some federal employees, such as persons in the armed forces, are invested.

The amounts invested by the CPP Investment Fund in the third quarter in securities of the provinces and the federal government were as follows:

Ontario, $232,591,000; British Columbia, $66,189,000; Alberta, $47,085,000; Manitoba, $25,237,000; Saskatchewan, $19,316,000; Nova Scotia, $17,321,000; New Brunswick, $13,515,000; Newfoundland, $9,300,000; Canada, $3,034,000; Prince Edward Island, $1,924,000 and Quebec, $1,867,000.

GAS ECONOMY & STANDARD FEATURES:
If you're looking to get gas economy of only 6.5 litres per 100 kilometres* out of your new wagon, you won't get it in a Pinto. But you will get it with a new 210. And a Pinto will make you pay extra for features that are standard on a 210.
TRANSMISSION CHOICE & INTERIOR ROOM:
You can't buy a Honda Civic wagon with an economical 5-speed transmission. But you can get it on the 210 Sports Wagon. And if you want a roomy interior, the 210 is more than 8 inches longer and 3 inches wider than the Civic.
All 79 Datsuns are covered by the Datsun 6 Year Anti-Rust Plan.
MANEUVERABILITY & CARGO ROOM:
You can turn a 210 Sports Wagon in only 32.8 ft. Cargo space? The 210 Sports Wagon gives you 12 cubic feet more of it than the Corolla wagon. Parking or packing—you're better off in a 210!
WHERE OTHER ECONOMY WAGONS LEAVE OFF, THE '79 DATSUN 210 KEEPS RIGHT ON GOING.
The Datsun 210 Sports Wagon – new for '79. Add it up.
You're buying at least 2.0 fewer litres of gas per 100 kilometres* than you'd need to with a Pinto. Plus a much longer list of standard features.
You're getting a longer, legroomier, wider interior than you'd get in a Honda Civic wagon.
You can get a gas-saving 5-speed transmission that the Civic wagon doesn't even offer. You're getting 12 cubic feet more cargo capacity than you'd get with the Corolla wagon.
For its economy price, the '79 Datsun 210 Sports Wagon adds up to unbeatable value. And Datsun dares to put its six year anti-corrosion policy in writing.

Jamieson Heading for S. Africa For Namibia Talks

OTTAWA (CP) — External Affairs Minister Don Jamieson says he and other top Western leaders will go to South Africa this weekend ready to discuss minor modifications to a United Nations plan for an independent Namibia.

He indicated in an interview Wednesday they are prepared to suggest solutions to South African objections about a proposed 7,500-man UN peacekeeping force in Namibia.

"We feel it may be possible to have some troops stationed outside Namibia on a stand-by basis," he said.

South Africa rejected the UN plan for a transition to black majority rule, claiming the UN force was much larger than originally suggested by the Western group — Canada, France, Britain, the United States and West Germany.

Western leaders have said the UN plan is basically the same as one accepted earlier this year by South Africa, and by the South-West Africa People's Organization (SWAPO).

South Africa has said elections will be held in Namibia in December. UN Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim recommended elections in early 1979 to allow all groups in Namibia enough time to prepare for fair elections.

The Western leaders are going to South Africa in an effort to salvage the UN plan. The UN has set an Oct. 23 deadline for a South African response.

Jamieson, leaving tonight for London, said the Western group feels the size of the UN force "isn't really valid grounds for rejecting the UN initiative."

The Western group will try to clarify some issues and calm South African fears about the UN plan, he said.

He is to join British Foreign Secretary David Owen in London for a flight to Windhoek, Namibia, to talk to national political leaders Saturday. He will talk with other members of the Western group Sunday in Pretoria, the South African capital, before sitting down with South African leaders next week.

Jamieson noted that South African leaders have been careful to leave the door open to further negotiations on Namibia.

The Western group will not suggest any significant changes to the UN plan, he said. Along with the 7,500 troops the UN approved a civilian group of about 1,200 to help prepare the vast territory for free elections.

Jamieson said the South Africans seem to feel the UN plan would mean dropping 7,500 troops immediately into Namibia. But that wasn't the plan. Troops would be introduced gradually and some could be stationed outside the territory on stand-by.

GAY AD BAN STICKS

OTTAWA (CP) — The CBC, after review, has decided to stick to its policy of refusing all public service announcements from homosexual organizations, the Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission was told Wednesday.

Mike Johnston of the Canadian Lesbian and Gay Rights Coalition said this is a case of discrimination based on sexual orientation and asked the commission to order the CBC to carry the free-time messages of homosexual groups advertising meetings and social events.

The CBC policy says controversial subjects cannot be carried in public messages and that it considered homosexuality in that category.

Underground Poetry

TORONTO (CP) — Poetry is being advertised to millions of Metropolitan Toronto subway riders in what has been called Canada's newest magazine, Poetry Underground.

Max Layton, son of poet Irving Layton and originator of the project, said Wednesday that the first of nine pages of poetry was posted in 30 subway stations at the beginning of October.

The Canada Council, Ontario Arts Council, and Metro council's cultural committee provided about $14,000 of the estimated $27,000 needed to publish nine editions of the magazine, and Layton has pledges for grants from various private enterprises.

Smith Gets Short Shrift

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — Rhodesian Prime Minister Ian Smith has been unable to convince the U.S. government his internal settlement is the best way to bring majority rule to Rhodesia. Smith winds up his five-day visit to Washington today.

On his final day in Washington, the Rhodesian leader continued the heavy program of private interviews he has maintained since he arrived in the United States last Saturday, but had no public appearances scheduled.

Rhodesian officials travelling with Smith were disappointed that his stay in the U.S. capital has not had the impact they had hoped.

Smith and Rev. Ndabaningi Sithole, one of the three black members of Rhodesia's executive council, did not attract a full house Wednesday when they addressed the National Press Club, Washington's traditional forum for visiting dignitaries.

Smith had hoped to win both U.S. official and private backing for his internal transfer-of-power arrangements.

But a meeting with State Secretary Cyrus Vance ended in deadlock on Monday and no further official talks were expected. At a news conference Tuesday, President Carter told reporters he saw no reason to meet Smith.

The Rhodesian leader acknowledged Wednesday he has been unable to sway the U.S. position.

"Regrettably, I see no signs of any change of heart in the attitude of the United States," he said.

"I see no appreciation of the moralities of this issue; no signs of any pressure on the terrorists to reduce, let alone stop, their murderous attacks on black and white civilians.

"I see no encouragement for us to implement a peaceful transition to majority rule through free elections."

The United States is urging Smith to attend a conference bringing together all the parties to the Rhodesian dispute, a proposal he has not so far accepted because he has said that its principal aim would be to force guerrilla representation in the Rhodesian government.

He will spend Friday in New York before flying to Los Angeles for a weekend on the West Coast.

In a related development, a Roman Catholic bishop deported from Rhodesia last year as an undesirable person told a news conference that Smith's visit will help turn black Africa towards communism.

"How the leaders of the Kremlin and Peking must be rubbing their hands in satisfaction as they see the representatives of racist repression being given a hearing in this country," said Bishop Donald Lamont.

Lamont was expelled from Rhodesia after being sentenced to 10 years in prison — later reduced to four years on appeal — for failing to report the presence of suspected black guerrillas in his diocese. The bishop, deported before he served any time in prison, now lives in Dublin.

He told reporters that any gestures to Smith make communism look attractive to blacks, who now look to Britain and the United States as their friendliest powers.

Heat Stroke Killed Youth?

VANCOUVER (CP) — Two Outward Bound school instructors failed to spot that a student was suffering from heat-stroke shortly before he died June 3 on a mountain in the Okanagan, a coroner's court was told Wednesday.

Dr. John Haywood, a University of Victoria biologist known for his work on human thermal regulation, said the dizziness, stumbling and exhausted state shown by John Atkinson, 20, plus a period of hyperventilation, showed heat-stroke was imminent.

Dr. Jack Taunton, a medical doctor who specializes in sport medicine, said instructors responsible for the hike on which Atkinson died thought he had heat exhaustion.

He said heat-stroke was one of the recognized medical emergencies and required immediate treatment — immersion of the patient in a cold-water bath — if the patient was to survive.

His companions testified he kept lagging behind and needed constant encouragement to carry on.

They said at one point he stopped and said he wanted to go down the mountain because he could not go any further.

They also said two instructors encouraged a further effort after saying it would be the end of the course for him if he quit.

One student, Peter Mortifee, said Atkinson stopped for a rest then tumbled down the slope without trying to stop himself. A tree finally brought him to a halt.

He became convulsed and the instructors decided to bring him down the mountain by stretcher. During the evacuation he died and efforts to resuscitate him failed.

Haywood said that hypothermia is relatively unrecognized and hardly covered in regular first-aid books. He said Atkinson was a heavyset youth who did not apear to be fit and this combined with the lack of conditioning and high temperatures could have made him susceptible to hypothermia.

Food Cost Warning in Secret Document

By VICTOR MACKIE
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Food prices will remain an important economic and political problem for the next 12 months, the cabinet was warned in a secret memorandum submitted to it last summer.

At the end of the year the Consumer Price Index food component could be 10 per cent above its year-earlier level, the document said.

"While there might be a levelling off of food prices starting in the fall, uncertainties respecting prospective price development, combined with uncertainties about proposed changes in how Statistics Canada estimates changes that do take place, continue to mean that an inflation rate for food of up to 15 per cent is an approximate context in which to consider the 10 per cent projection," said the memo.

Copies of the document were obtained by the New Democratic Party and distributed to a few members of the media Wednesday. NDP leader Ed Broadbent said the confidential cabinet document outlined several "excellent ideas" for containing the rising cost of food.

The government had failed to act on all but one of the suggestions. The only proposal accepted was to inform Canadians about the difficulties involved in controlling food prices, said Broadbent.

"It fingers the middleman in the food chain as the chief villain in pushing up food prices. It states that raw commodity price increases 'do not explain' the rise in food prices between December and April."

Broadbent said Canadians were entitled to a full explanation.

"The prime minister should call in the heads of the major food retailers and processors to get a full account of where our food dollar is going and to ensure fair pricing in the future," he said.

PM Lying to Queen, Monarchist Head Says

PETERBOROUGH, Ont. (CP) — Monarchist Bruce Knapp said today a letter he received from the Queen's private secretary indicates Prime Minister Trudeau is pulling the wool over even the Queen's eyes regarding proposed constitutional changes.

Knapp said in an interview that the letter says the prime minister has assured the Queen the proposed constitutional changes do not affect the essential status of the Crown in Canada.

Knapp said, however, the records of Commons debates in Hansard show Trudeau plans changes affecting the status.

Knapp said he has written back to the Queen suggesting that perhaps she has "not been made fully aware of certain proposed courses of action in our nation."

The letter from the Queen's private secretary was in response to a telegram signed by 167 persons and sent to the Queen on Sept. 27.

The telegram said:

"We undersigned citizens of Ontario, Canada, send loyalist greetings and beg you not to cede royal powers and prerogatives—hitherto our bulwark against ambitious politicians—to federal government of Canada."

The Queen's secretary's response said in part:

"The prime minister has assured the Queen that the proposed constitutional changes to not affect in any way the essential status of the Crown in Canada.

"You can be sure that Her Majesty will in future, as in the past, do all in her power to maintain Canada's unity and prosperity."

On Wednesday the federal government said in the speech from the throne that the role of the monarchy would not be changed in Canada and revisions would be made to the constitutional changes proposed in June.

$63,666 To Park

The Capital Regional District has received a $63,666 grant from the municipal affairs ministry toward development of Port Lock Park on Salt Spring Island.

The grant will cover one-third of the cost of developing the park.

Recreational facilities the park will provide include a 400 metre track, a soccer pitch, two softball fields and two tennis courts.

The grant is from the Recreational Facilities Assistance Program, which provides funding of one-third of the capital construction costs and has a total budget of $400,000 for the development of recreational facilities in the province.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

A 53-year-old man found striking matches into a pool of gasoline in the basement of a Victoria home last Wednesday pleaded guilty in provincial court Wednesday to being unlawfully in a dwelling house.

Defence lawyer Paul Scambler entered the plea on behalf of Alexander Hordeew, 1425 Edgeware, and Judge Fred Green remanded Hordeew until Oct. 30 for a pre-sentence report and sentence.

Crown counsel Robert Mulligan told the court a tenant at 2426 Oregon heard noises in the basement shortly after midnight Oct. 4 and went to investigate. Hordeew was discovered striking matches and had to be physically subdued, Mulligan stated.

Hordeew told police he wanted to "burn the whole damn thing," after admitting he had been having difficulties with a woman living there.

Hordeew had been convicted Oct. 19, 1977, of impaired driving and fined $300 and Jan. 30, 1978, of assaulting a peace officer and given a five-day jail term.

Douglas Peter Harder, 36, of 2459 Mt. Baker in Sidney, was charged with obstructing the course of justice by threatening a witness in a trial scheduled for Friday.

Harder and another person are facing a charge of operating an illegal lottery and the trial is set for Friday.

Harder was released on his own recognizance in the sum of $1,000 on condition he have no contact with the complainant and was remanded until Friday for election of his trial method on the obstruction charge.

Green handed a 31-year-old man a nominal one-day jail term, six months' probation and 150 hours of community service work on a charge nearly 2½ years old.

Lawrence John Andrews, 525 Johnson, pleaded guilty to theft under $200, a charge he attempted to have disposed of while he was serving a six-month term imposed March 16, 1978, for breaking and entering and arson.

Mulligan said Andrews was employed on May 20, 1976, by the Chateau Lacombe in Edmonton as a parking attendant and was to collect all monies and turn over a $50 float at the end of his shift that day. However, Mulligan said, Andrews failed to do so and took the $192 he collected that day.

A 57-year-old man on his second drinking-driving offence in less than two years was given a 14-day jail term.

Carl Mapp, 2634 Quadra, pleaded guilty to having care and control of a motor vehicle while impaired Sept. 22.

Mulligan said Mapp's vehicle was involved in a minor accident in the Hotel Douglas parking lot and city police were called. Subsequent breath test readings of .21 and .20 were obtained, Mulligan stated.

Mapp was convicted Jan. 29, 1977, of impaired driving in Vancouver and was fined $250.

Fined for drinking-driving were: Paul Elliott Smith, 35, of 721 Jacklin, $400; Garcia Enrique Romero, 25, of 3155 Earl Grey, $375; Roland John Taylor, 46, of 423 Edwards, $350; Rita Grace Lemieux, 30, of 7874 West Coast Road, $350; Douglas Allan Sopher, 19, of CFB Work Point, $350; and Egon Thaagaard, 42, of 2842 Jacklin, $175.

B.C. BOOZERS BIG BAD BUNCH

About 10 per cent of the population of B.C. has an alcohol problem and the number is increasing, Health Minister Bob McClelland said Wednesday.

"British Columbia has the worst record of abuse of alcohol in Canada," McClelland told a news conference.

"Perhaps it is significant that we also have the worst driving accident record in Canada, and the two are probably connected."

He outlined a series of programs to make drinkers aware of the problem and said the government is expanding its network of alcohol treatment agencies.

"There are an estimated 237,000 British Columbians who are hazardous drinkers — that is, they are already experiencing ill health due to their drinking, or they are in danger of doing so."

He said, of these, 113,000 are alcoholics: "Each day the numbers grow."

The minister said alcohol-related problems will cost B.C. industries more than $200 million this year in lost productivity, absenteeism and accidents on the job.

$200 Fine Follows False Rape Report

Deborah Sherrie Wright, 25, was fined $200 and placed on probation for a year when she appeared for sentence in county court Wednesday for falsely reporting rape.

She had pleaded guilty Aug. 4 to causing police to begin an investigation of an offence, knowing it had not been committed.

The circumstances arose from a drinking session and subsequently going to Esquimalt Lagoon with two men, whom she accused of rape. Her zipper broke and she was worried about how to explain it to her fiance, court was told.

Judge Richard Low made a condition of probation that counselling be obtained for Wright's drinking problem.

Tickner Heads Labor Group

The first steps have been taken toward organizing a Labor History Association.

At a meeting at the University of Victoria Tuesday night, Larry Tickner was elected pro-tem chairman of a committee to co-ordinate suggestions related to the proposed association.

Another meeting is set for two weeks when discussion will centre around the scope, objectives and a name for the organization.

'Going to Run Them Out'

A relative of a slain woman testified at a B.C. Supreme Court trial Wednesday he was told by the man accused of murdering her and a male companion he "was going to run them out."

Frank Walter of Port Alice told the jury he received a telephone call Dec. 10, 1977, from John Auxi, of Victoria, about Walter's sister-in-law Gizelle Schild, who with Sandor Kormos was found the following day shot dead in Kormos' room.

The witness said Auxi told him his sister-in-law was a cheap whore and that he "was going to run them out." He later told the court Auxi meant Kormos and Schild.

Auxi, 40, was subsequently charged with the double slaying, and his trial on two counts of first degree murder opened Tuesday before the jury and Mr. Justice H.E. Hutcheon.

The bodies of Schild, 41, and Kormos, 43, were found the morning of Dec. 11 by another resident of the roominghouse at 1242 Fort where Kormos lived with Schild. Both had been shot in the head at close quarters by a small calibre weapon.

Walter said he had four telephone conversations in the Hungarian language at his Port Alice home between Dec. 1 and Dec. 11. He said the caller identified himself as John Auxi, a man he had heard of but never met.

The first call was about a Mrs. Mochar, the mother of Schild's husband Bela who had died of natural causes. Walter said Auxi wanted to bring the mother from Hungary for the funeral and asked if Walter would contribute to the cost.

In the second phone call Walter said he told Auxi a "definite no," that he did not believe in coming 7,000 miles to see a dead man.

The two spoke again Dec. 10 and Auxi told Walter the mother had arrived and Auxi had taken her to see Giselle Schild. Walter said he spoke to the mother after Auxi and that both were upset.

Auxi also said Walter was not to let Schild in the house if she should ever go to Port Alice, but Walter said he told Auxi that was his own business. Walter said Auxi spoke "like someone ordering what to do."

The final call was on the morning of Dec. 11 and Walter said he didn't know which of them placed it. He said nothing of substance was said, but he was surprised that Auxi was calm and amiable.

Later, when he came down for Schild's funeral, he said he met Mrs. Mochar and offered to take her to visit with his family in Port Alice, but she did not go.

Under cross-examination by defence counsel Keith Libby, Walter said some of the telephone conversation with Auxi had been about Schild's children, particularly a son Joseph who had been living with Auxi and caused him concern.

The boy, who now lives with the Walters, had a genuine liking for Auxi, "and still does," Walter said.

In one conversation with Auxi, Walter said he told the man he thought Giselle Schild was mentally ill and recommended that Auxi have her committed to a hospital in the children's best interests.

In earlier testimony the origin of a rifle alleged to be the murder weapon was traced from its purchase in Toronto in 1975 by Istvan Sebes, who gave evidence through interpreter Julie Ann Henry. He said he lived on a farm out of Toronto and bought the .22 rifle to shoot rabbits and pheasants, but had used it no more than 20 times.

Coming to Victoria late in the fall of 1976, Sebes said he went to live in a room in Auxi's basement for five months because Auxi's telephone number was his only contact in the city. At Christmas he gave Auxi the rifle because he had no use for it in Victoria and was short of money.

He identified a rifle entered as a Crown exhibit as the one he bought at Eaton's in Toronto, and showed the court where he had stitched its leather sling. He also recognized a copy of a sales receipt for the rifle, with a serial number and his signature.

Sebes said he had known Schild and her husband and had last seen them about October 1977. He knew Kormos also, and had given money to him because he never worked: "He played cards, walked around and lived on welfare," Sebes said.

On two occasions he gave Kormos $20, and to Giselle Schild he gave $60-$80, the last time about two years ago. But he also had given Bela Schild some money, the last time $20 a week before he died.

Insp. Gordon Bennett, a staff-sergeant of city police at the time of the murders, said he conducted an interview with Auxi in December 1977. In cross-examination he was asked if he had suggested to Auxi "you are going to get him for this crime?"

Bennett said he was not aware of anyone making that suggestion or words to that effect, "not while I was in the interview room."

"Or words to the effect that he had a tumor in his head?" Libby asked.

"It's possible, my lord," Bennett replied.

"What was the purpose?"

"I can't recall."

"Do you agree it was a rather cruel thing to say, if it was said?"

"Yes, I would agree with that," the officer said.

"Is it possible someone said, 'we're going to get you. You're crazy. You've got a tumor in your head.' "?

"It's possible."

Amateur scuba diver David Miles told the court how he had found a .22 rifle bolt action in about 15 feet of water at Ogden Point breakwater about 10:45 a.m. Dec. 12, and later turned it over to Constable Bruce Korn, who turned it over to Staff-Sgt. Bennett, who in turn gave it to Constable Gary Green, an identification officer.

Another scuba diver, Ray Hall, said he was diving at the breakwater Dec. 20 when he found a single-shot, bolt-action .22 rifle with the bolt missing, also in about 15 feet of water, 20 feet from the top of the breakwater. When he picked it off the bottom in his gloved hand, he accidentally touched the trigger and it shattered into small fragments.

Firearms expert Sgt. Donald Watson, of the RCMP crime detection laboratory in Vancouver, said he received six lead alloy bullets previously identified as having come from the bodies and room of the murdered couple. He later received the rifle, bolt action and eight flesh samples.

Watson said two bullets — one from the skull of Kormos, the other from the bed in which Schild was found — matched a number of features of test bullets fired from the exhibit rifle. It was possible and probable, he said, that they were shot from the same rifle.

He was unable to say whether two of the specimen bullets were fired from that rifle; one definitely was not from that rifle, and the last sample was in fragments too small to be examined.

Under cross-examination, Watson said he could not be positive the first two bullets were fired from the same gun, and that more than one weapon could have been involved, possibly a semi-automatic pistol as suggested by Libby.

Tree Kills Father, Son

SQUAMISH (CP) — Charles Domonic Deferro, 43, and his 13-year-old son Bradford, both of Squamish, were killed in a tree-felling accident.

Police said the two were cutting down a tree with a chainsaw near the dump in here, when the tree came down and crushed them both.

Not Your Average Super Salmon Loaf

Your average super salmon loaf tastes good and is good for you. But Cheesy Salmon Supper is not just your average super salmon loaf. The ingredient list provides not only an especially pleasing combination of flavors and textures, but also the nutritional benefits of all four of Canada's important food groups.

And the basic recipe leaves lots of room for imaginative substitutions. The cheese, vegetables, cereal, spices and sauce may be changed to suit individual tastes or kitchen cupboard supplies. Each combination adds up to a taste treat and a nutritious meal.

Creativity needn't stop with ingredient selection. Cheesy Salmon Supper may be served in a number of appetizing forms: your average super salmon meat loaf, golden fried patties, as filling for a sandwich surprise or a golden ring from the microwave.

CHEESY SALMON SUPPER

- 2 cans (7¾-oz. each) B.C. Salmon
- 1 tablespoons lemon juice
- 2 eggs, beaten
- 1 cup rolled oats or soft breadcrumbs
- 1 grated cheese of your choice
- ¼ cup diced onion or celery
- ½ cup diced raw carrot
- ½ teaspoon salt
- ⅛ teaspoon pepper
- ½ teaspoon dill weed or dried parsley
- 1 can (10 oz.) cream of mushroom or cream of shrimp soup
- ½ to 1 cup milk

Preheat oven to 350° F. Empty salmon, including juice, skin and bones, into mixing bowl. Mash bones thoroughly and flake salmon. Sprinkle with lemon juice. Add remaining ingredients except soup and milk. Mix well to blend thoroughly. Spoon mixture into 8 x 4 x 3-inch loaf pan. Bake for 30-40 minutes until edges are brown and centre is firm. Dilute soup with milk to desired consistency. Heat and pour over loaf just before serving.

Variations:

Cheesy Salmon Patties: Shape salmon mixture into 8 patties. Chill in refrigerator for 15 minutes. Melt 2 tablespoons butter or margarine in skillet. Over medium heat, saute patties until golden brown and heated through, turning once.

Cheesy Salmon Sandwiches: Cooked and chilled patties or loaf slices make excellent sandwich fillings. Spread bread or buns with butter and/or favorite sandwich spread before filling.

Cheesy Salmon Ring: In the microwave, place a small custard cup, open side up, in the middle of a 9-inch pie plate. Spoon salmon mixture around cup, spreading evenly. Cover with waxed paper. Microwave on high 9-11 minutes, rotating dish one-half turn after 5 minutes. Let stand, covered, 5 minutes before serving. (Stated cooking time applies to 650-watt oven.)

VIVE LA FRANCE: CUISINE IN A CAN

By RAFAELA EPPALA

PARIS (UPI) — The French have come up with a new status symbol — chefs' foods served at home.

Some of France's greatest restaurant chefs will be represented this fall with lines of canned, frozen or packaged foods sold through fine food stores in Paris. Among them are Paul Bocuse, Michel Guerard, Roger Verge and the Troisgros brothers.

Guerard, the inventor of cuisine minceur, the slimness cuisine that uses little or no eggs, flour or butter, has opened his own shop, Comptoir Gourmand.

Bocuse's products include a canned version of his special truffle soup, $15 for a tin for two; his canned goose cassoulet (a bean and goose stew), foie gras (goose liver) pates, calf brains stuffed with pistachios and sorrel soup are $25-$100.

The Troisgros will sell their mousse de grives (thrush mousse) at $30 a pound; ham with fresh pepper, $15 a pound; and duck rillettes (pate), $12.50 a pound.

From two of Paris' top restaurants, Hesson of 5 Rue du Coq l'Heron and Le Camelia of Bougival, duck foie gras at $75 a pound and Scottish smoked salmon at $33 a pound, respectively.

Maxim's last year opened the first French take-out store to represent a famous restaurant and is planning U.S. branches. Maxim's boutique sells such things as plates, glases, flatware and table linens.

The store has been so successful that the restaurant and its partner, fashion designer Pierre Cardin, plan to open branches around the world.

Now's the time to reinvest in new Canada Savings Bonds

1 Locate and identify your bonds

1969/70 Series (S24) maturing November 1, 1978,

Look for "S24" or "SR" preceding the serial number on the corner of your maturing bonds.

2 Find out the cash value of your bonds

At maturity, every holder of "S24" or "SR" bonds will receive the face value shown on the bond, plus a special cash bonus payment and any interest payable on the bonds.

If you have any questions about the value of your bonds, just ask the people where you bank or invest.

3 Special arrangements make it easy to reinvest

Simply present your "S24" and "SR" Series Canada Savings Bonds to your bank or other authorized redemption agent.

All the paperwork in connection with the redemption of your bonds will be done for you at that time. For "S24" bonds the transfer of funds will take place automatically on November 1.

In the same transaction, you can sign up for the new 1978/79 Series Canada Savings Bonds. You may reinvest all proceeds from your maturing bonds in the new Series. Also, you may buy an additional amount up to $30,000, the purchase limit of the 1978/79 Series. It's a great way to keep your money working for you!

Act now

There are more than 900,000 Canadians who own maturing bonds. If you are one of them, go to your bank, investment dealer, trust company or credit union and make arrangements to reinvest in the new Canada Savings Bonds. Do it now and avoid the rush!

New Canada Savings Bonds offer you a great choice

With the new Series, you have a choice of bonds. There's a Regular Interest Bond that pays interest each year. And a Compound Interest Bond that reinvests your interest automatically, earning interest on your interest.

The Regular Interest Bond

If you want a regular annual income from your investment, you'll like the Regular Interest Bond which pays interest automatically each November 1.

If you're like many bondholders, you'll appreciate the direct deposit feature. With this convenient option, your interest is deposited directly into your chequing or savings account. Simply ask for it when you buy your new bonds. Or, you can receive your interest by cheque through the mail.

The Compound Interest Bond

If you seek savings growth, or an investment for the future, or a retirement fund, you'll choose the Compound Interest Bond which earns interest on your interest, after the first year, at the guaranteed annual rate of 8.90%. For example, a $100 bond will grow to $181.74 at maturity in just 7 years.

Security and instant cash

Whichever type of bond you choose, you will own a safe, secure investment which can be turned into instant cash whenever you need it.

A good return

New Canada Savings Bonds are dated November 1, 1978 and yield an average annual interest of 8.90% when held to maturity in 1985. Each new bond earns interest of 8.50% the first year and 9% for each of the remaining 6 years.

Buying Canada Savings Bonds has been a great Canadian tradition for over 30 years. They're the proven choice.

Vegetarian Diet? Care Is Important

By Dr. Jean Mayer and Dr. Johanna Dwyer

Concerned readers often ask us about vegetarian diets for younger members of their families. "I'm worried they'll waste away," is a common refrain among parents whose children are turning to vegetarianism in increasing numbers.

First, let us assure you that with proper planning, most vegetarian diets are as healthy as the typical diet, perhaps even healthier. After all, most of the world's population gets the bulk of its protein from vegetable sources rather than from meat.

But a healthy vegetarian does need to make sure he or she gets enough high-quality protein, vitamins and minerals. This means knowing something about vegetarianism.

There are many different kinds of vegetarians. The most common are:

NON-RED MEAT EATERS. Strictly speaking, these are not vegetarians, at least from the standpoint of most nutritionists. Such people avoid red meats, but most will eat other animal foods: milk products, fish and seafood, poultry and eggs. These are suitable substitutes for red meats, so vegetarians of this sort should have no problem getting enough proteins and other nutrients.

LACTO-OVO VEGETARIANS. Lacto-ovos avoid meat and most other animal products, but will eat milk and eggs. With planning, they have little to worry about nutritionally since eggs and dairy products produce ample protein. But those concerned about cholesterol would do well to limit their eggs to two or three a week, and choose low-fat milk products over the hard cheeses, which can have a fair amount of cholesterol and be high in saturated fat as well.

VEGANS. The smallest group of vegetarians in this country, vegans avoid all foods that come from animals and live solely on plant foods. To get adequate amounts of vitamin B12, which is found only in animal foods, vegans need specially fortified foods or vitamin supplements. Vegan diets also may be low in calcium, iron, riboflavin and perhaps certain trace minerals such as zinc and copper. We recommend that anyone on or contemplating a vegan diet consult a physician and a dietician so that deficiency problems can be avoided.

OTHER TYPES OF VEGETARIANS. There are several diets linked to religious and other groups. These include Krishnas, macrobiotics and some yoga groups who insist that all their foods be organically grown; they shun all enriched or fortified foods. While it is still possible to get a healthy assortment of food, the choices are more limited. Again, planning is needed to ensure proper nutrition.

Planning is the key. It is quite possible to get adequate protein from a vegetarian diet, particularly if milk and eggs are acceptable. If they are not, the vegetarians must turn to alternate sources - usually rice and other cereals, dried beans, lentils and other legumes, nuts and sprouts - to get sufficient protein. They might consider the special vegetarian products found in most supermarkets - soybean cheese (tufu), and various meat substitutes made from soybeans and other vegetables.

Many vegetarians find that they eat more bread and cereal, thus making up for some of the calories and protein normally supplied by meat and other animal products. They also eat a wide variety of vegetables and fruits, including more nutritious, but less common items such as kale, turnip greens, various squashes and melons.

A final word of caution: Many of the foods in a vegetarian diet tend to be high in fibre and rather filling. To get enough protein, vitamins and minerals, the vegetarians must eat fairly large amounts of grains, fruits and vegetables to provide sufficient calories in addition to nutrients.

Food for Thought

Homemade Yogurt

500 mL skim milk powder
1.2 L lukewarm water
1 can (454 g) evaporated milk
50 mL Swiss-style plain yogurt OR homemade yogurt

Combine skim milk powder, water and milk. Stir in yogurt and mix well. Pour into warm sterilized jars, filling to within 2 cm from top. Cover with plastic wrap, then lids. Place in pan of lukewarm water (45° C). Water should be level with top of yogurt. Cover pan and put in warm place to maintain water temperature (the centre of top of 75 cm stove with oven set at about 110° C is a suitable place). Allow to stand, without disturbing, until set (2 to 4 hours). Refrigerate overnight. May be stored in refrigerator for about 2 weeks. Makes about 2 L.

Use homemade yogurt from latest batch. Make first batch with packaged dried of liquid yogurt culture according to package directions and prepare a batch about every 4 days. At end of 1 month begin with fresh culture.

Flavored Yogurt

With Jam: Add 25 mL jam to 250 mL Plain Yogurt and refrigerate 2 hours to set and blend flavors.

With Fruit: Add 25 mL sugar to 250 mL Plain Yogurt. Combine 50 mL sliced or mashed fresh fruit sweetened with 15 mL sugar OR 50 mL chopped canned fruit and 25 mL syrup to 250 mL sweetened yogurt. Refrigerate 2 hours to set and blend flavors.

Feed Warning

PROVO, Utah (AP) — A nursing professor at Birgham Young University says her studies suggest that feeding premature infants too often may put unnecessary strain on their circulatory systems.

Patricia Isaacs said her study showed a sharply increased blood flow to the arms and legs immediately after feeding. Ms. Isaacs said findings were the opposite of that for full-term infants.

U.S. Sales Soar

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sales by retail stores in the United States totalled $66.5 billion in September, an increase of two per cent over August and 12 per cent oyer September, 1977.

Callaghan to China

LONDON (AP) — Prime Minister James Callaghan has accepted an invitation to visit China and also invited Chinese Chairman Hua Kuo-feng to come to Britain, government officials say.

Diet Questioned

HAMILTON (CP) — Studies have shown a bland diet makes no difference in the healing rate of stomach or duodenal ulcers, says an assistant professor of medicine says.

Dr. Evan Smith of McMaster Univerity said that "the white, mushy, uninteresting low-fibre diet is almost revered as a treatment for ulcers."

Drinking milk hourly, however, can result in a weight gain of 10 pounds and the calcium in milk can stimulate acid secretion, he said in a speech at McMaster Health Sciences Centre.

Dr. Smith later said in an interview that he would not suggest ulcer patients eat everything edible.

"They should avoid anything that bothers them."

dear abby

DEAR ABBY: My husband loves to sing. He has had a few voice lessons and is quite good for an amateur. He has a large repertoire of songs and even has the piano accompaniment on tape to take with him when he goes where there will be no piano accompanist.

Sometimes he sings beautifully, but he usually sings too long and he frequently forgets the lyrics. He is 74.

The problem is that he wants me to ask him to sing when we have guests, or when we go elsewhere as guests. Our friends have been very patient with him so far, but no one else has ever asked him to sing, and when I ask him, it's like asking little Johnny to recite before a captive audience.

For years I have urged him to join a choral group, but he prefers to sing solo. This is partly because he can't read music, and partly because he can't hold a part if someone is singing a different note next to him.

Am I wrong in refusing to ask him to sing? He gets very upset with me, and says if I loved him I'd co-operate. Is there a solution?

DEAR WIFE: Yes. Suggest that he give recitals, invite his friends, and sing to his heart's content.

DEAR ABBY: This letter is one more comment in the debate on the mother-daughter trust that has been raging in your column.

It seems that a great many mothers have among their daily chores the cleaning up of their children's rooms. During that cleaning, mothers invariably discover things that their children prefer to keep secret.

Fortunately, I have never had that problem. My mother has always believed that I should clean up my own room — or not clean it up, as I choose. Besides, she has enough other things to do without doing for me that which I am perfectly capable of doing for myself. — N.L.

DEAR N.L.: You sound like a very together daughter. Congratulate your mother for me. She taught you responsibility.

DEAR ABBY: Let me tell you about a handicapped person I know. He's paralyzed from the waist down. Now some folks think that the disabled are also retarded. That's not so. My friend attended college and now works for a large insurance company as an underwriter.

And as for getting around — yes, it takes a few minutes more for him to get into his car, but he gets there. His car is equipped with hand controls of course, but you should see this guy dance. When he does the "bump" his whole body and chair swings with him.

He also lifts weights — up to 300 pounds. He's even won medals for it. Some of you able-bodied men should try lifting a 300-pound weight.

And as for love — well, he knows more about love than a lot of people.

How come I know so much about him? He's my husband. And he's not nearly as "handicapped" as most people think. (Sign me ...) — FUNNY FACE

According to the folder What Is Mental Health? a mentally healthy person is often described as one who feels comfortable with himself, feels right about other people and is able to meet the demands of life.

This brief explanation points to a person who can cope with life's disappointments, knows his own worth and can control his emotions, like fear, anger, love, guilt or worry.

A person who enjoys mental health is also able to like and trust others and assumes they will like and trust him. He tries to cope with his problems as they rise, welcomes new experiences, is able to think for himself and make his own decisions.

Remember, however, that nobody has the characteristics of mental health at all times. Everybody has their ups and downs.

Another folder, Mental Health — Keep It In Mind, states that every year mental illness strikes more Canadians combined. One person in three becomes temporarily disabled at some time because of emotional problems. One in six will require psychiatric care.

This folder also explains what you can do to promote mental health, like doing volunteer work in a mental health clinic, helping people who have suffered mental illness to a come-back into the community or become involved in the rehabilitation of children and teenagers with emotional problems.

They Appear So Clean But Rinse Them Anyway

By CRAIG CLAIBORNE
New York Times

craig claiborne

Q. I am frequently in a quandary when I prepare a salad with watercress, Belgian endive and white fresh mushrooms. They look so clean, rinsing seems like an unnecessary nuisance. Should I rinse or not?

A. Interviews with the growers of all three ingredients tell me that their products are totally clean. However, as the owner of a watercress farm once said to me, "The greens are clean but it's so easy to rinse and drain, why not?" There is also a slight posibility that a string or something might have got into the packaging. You should rinse. In the case of Belgian endive, rinsing in cold water will tend to keep the salad white once cut. Otherwise the cut portion may tend to darken.

Q. When I make an egg custard such as sauce anglaise, I stir the egg yolks, sugar, milk, vanilla and so on very carefully in a heavy pan using a wooden spoon, as recommended. It thickens nicely but I remove it from the heat, stirring, and still the custard curdles. What can I do?

A. The problem is that the custard continues to cook from retained heat once it is cooked. You should remove the saucepan from the heat and, without pause, scrape the custard, using a plastic spatula, into a mixing bowl. Or, if you prefer, remove the saucepan from the heat when the custard is ready and plunge the bottom immediately into a basin of cold water to arrest the cooking action.

Q. Many recipes call for freshly ground black pepper. Last weekend I gave a party for 50 and served fried chicken. The chicken seasoning needed nearly half a cup of ground pepper and it took me a good part of the morning using a pepper grinder. There must be an easier way to grind pepper in quantity.

A. There is. I keep a small electric spice or coffee grinder for grinding peppercorns. It works in seconds. I use it only for peppercorns and not coffee. Once in a while, if a large quantity of a ground spice is called — cumin, coriander, cardamom and so on — I will wipe out the grinder and use it for the other spices. Then I wipe it once more for re-use with pepper. On the other hand, I still use a hand-turned peppermill for small quantities of freshly ground pepper when called for.

Q. Most salad dressings call for using three parts oil to one part vinegar. I try to follow those proportions and some of my salad dressings taste like pure vinegar. Any suggestions?

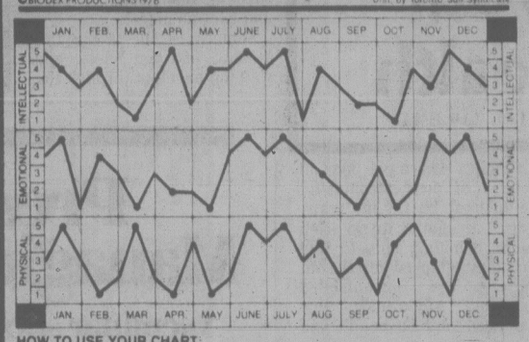

A. Although the proportions are valid, they are not immutable. As in most kitchen matters, you should use your own judgment and taste. The fact is that there can be a considerable variance in the acidity of one vinegar and another. The strength of Swedish vinegar is much greater than that of American supermarket vinegar. If so, when you have used the above proportions, your salad dressing is too acid, add more olive oil to get the right balance. Also, if you add mustard to your salad dressing that, too, will be acid and will require at least a touch more oil for balance.

Bio-dex

HOW TO USE YOUR CHART:

BIO-DEX READOUT:

0-5 Negative Cycle — Study the facts again before making an accusation. It's quite possible that you are in the wrong.

6-10 Neutral Cycle — What have you forgotten? Absent-mindedness could be embarrassing, so double check every detail.

11-15 Positive Cycle — Your creativity is highlighted. Try your hand at poetry or a craft; the results may surprise you.

How unlucky can you get! A low Bio-dex on all three curves for Friday the thirteenth! Of course you could try staying in bed - but is your home equipped with smoke and burglar alarms? My best advice is to follow your normal routine; avoid special activities that could mean danger, and put off decision-making until this day passes.

NUTRITION BUYLINE

QUESTION:
Does wheat germ with the oil removed have any food value?

ANSWER:
If you want to buy raw wheat germ, be sure it is fresh, preferably directly from the mill and has been refrigerated. Wheat germ contains a fair amount of polyunsaturated oil which tends to go rancid quickly. Rancidity will considerably decrease the vitamin E in the oil. You may prefer to buy roasted wheat germ. The roasting process destroys the enzymes that cause rancidity.

Manufacturers package the wheat germ after roasting in jars or tightly sealed plastic pouches to retain the fresh flavor. Some wheat germ has the oil completely removed and should be labelled as such. The removal of the oil removes the fat-soluble vitamin E, but the wheat germ still contains protein, the water soluble B vitamins and minerals.

QUESTION:
I understand that soybeans contain more protein than other vegetables, but do they contain the eight essential amino acids?

ANSWER:
Soybeans are high in protein of good nutritional value. The essential amino acids are all present. However, the amount of methionine is low. If soybean products are to become a major protein source for man, they should be combined with another vegetable protein or with an animal protein to ensure an optimum quality protein.

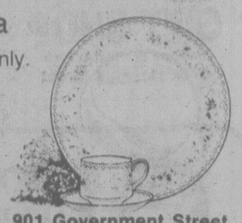

QUESTION:
Is iodized salt better for me than plain or sea salt?

ANSWER:
Iodized salt is better because it contains iodine, which plain or sea salt does not contain. Unless you eat generaous amounts of seafoods, your diet may be low in the essential trace mineral iodine. Iodine is necessary for the thyroid gland to make the hormone thyroxin. Inadequate thyroxin can lead to a condition known as goitre, which is an enlargement of the thyroid glands located in the front of the base of the neck. This condition is now very rare in Canada because all table salt has iodine added to it by law.

When You're Rolling in Dough, Look to Madame

The lesson in making French bread had gone awry.

Bread dough was sticking to the table here, cracking over there. One man worked on a ball of dough with skin as rough as a crocodile. Another student's dough was pitmarked with "ulcers."

"How ees eet possible?" she asked.

Once again she showed the class the right way to knead the dough:

"You must develop a conga rhythm—one, two, three, kick. And turn the dough on the kick."

"You don't know how to knead" she said. "But tomorrow morning you will." Tomorrow morning, she said, the class would have to make bread again, before breakfast.

"Tonight you will go to bed and go one, two, three, kick," she said, gesturing, showing them how to practise kneading dough. "And the whole motel will reverberate."

The woman of the mercurial moods and upstairs-downstairs personality is Madame Liane Kuony, a cooking evangelist who improbably holds her revivals in the small midwestern town of Fond du Lac, Wis.

The August class included professionals, would-be professionals and amateurs with an appetite. There were men and women.

There were wives of doctors and an Episcopalian priest without a church. They came from all over.

The fame of Madame Kuony has spread slowly. She started the Postillion Restaurant in her home 30 years ago, a few years after she came from France and married a man who settled in Fond du Lac. Now people pay $25 for the dinner, which is served once a week, and the restaurant is booked up until next March.

She started the Postillion School of Culinary Arts in her home 18 years ago, but national reknown came in recent years with articles in Gourmet and Bon Appetit magazines.

Cooking schools are commonplace in North America but this is no fashionable little school for bored wives. Madame's is in the European tradition.

The two-week, 100-hour course is demanding and disciplined (Madame warns students the first day that "most of you will think I'm a witch with a capital B.")

And she also warns them they won't be ready to go out and teach cooking classes or go into the restaurant business just because they've studied with her.

For better or worse, the students always taste what they have made, from traditionally French boeuf Bourguignonne and coq au vin and coffee pots de creme to hash, poached eggs and bread pudding.

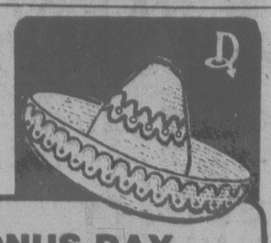

Madame matches the genius of her palate with theatre. It is the secret of her success. She needs no cues and uses no notes.

Sometimes she is playful, kicking off her shoes and walking barefoot through the grass. Occasionally she breaks into song, and it is infectious. The students join in, happy to sing Alouette while kneading dough.

"It's not that I want to be a messiah," she says, though she spends her days training disciples, both in Fond du Lac and in Milwaukee where she has opened a second school.

"But I feel we should leave this world a little bit better. I cannot reform the world, but I can make your life a little fuller."

Back to Social Drinking Isn't Worth the Risk

Dr. L. L. COLEMAN

I read with great interest your article, "Alcoholism is a Family Disease." Only those of us who have lived through it can really understand the devastation alcohol causes. My husband is an alcoholic and has been "dry" for five years. Somewhere he read that cured alcoholics can begin to drink again socially. Spurred on by this report, he is back where he started. Why should such nonsense be allowed to get so much national publicity? Alcoholics and their families need your additional support.— Mrs. B.F.

Dear Mrs. F.:

There is no such thing as a "cured" alcoholic. Once an alcoholic, always an alcoholic. There is, however, the very real control of alcoholism by total abstinence.

The report your husband read is known as the "Rand Report." This indicated that some alcoholics can again return to becoming just social drinkers.

From the purely scientific point of view, the Rand Report may have had some validity. From the practical point of view, I personally feel that it was a mistake to widely publicize this material. It can only act as a tempting "green light" for those alcoholics who have been in control of their alcoholism. Unfortunately, far too many "dry" alcoholics again tried social drinking, only to find that they relapsed into the old patterns of uncontrolled drinking. Apparently, this has been your husband's sad experience.

It has been established that problem drinkers who are tempted to become moderate social drinkers again walk the tightrope of possible ruination by alcohol.

Dr. Alfonso Paredes, director of alcohol research at the University of Oklahoma, said to the National Council on Alcoholism, "Our data suggests that for those alcoholics who elect this option (trying to drink again) the risk of relapse is substantial."

I hope that controlled alcoholics will benefit from your husband's experience, and will resist the temptation to drink again.

Can you help teach young people not to borrow each other's cosmetics? As a teacher in high school I see this frequently. — Miss D.E., R.I.

Dear Miss D.E.:

I agree that eye infections can be passed by lending and borrowing mascara, eye liners and other forms of make-up. Lipsticks may be contaminated by people who have colds or herpes infections of the lip.

While not the most threatening of teen-age problems, it deserves emphasis by teachers and parents.

COCKER
. . . survived his decade

By LYNN DARLING
Washington Post

WASHINGTON — He sits in that stuffy hotel room, sweet and sad and ravaged and ready, Joe Cocker, who skated the edge some of the others slipped off, Hendrix and Joplin and Morrison.

And while they died and looked like martyrs to those who absolved them of responsibility for their fates, he survives after a fashion, looking like a fool to those for whom it wouldn't do that he didn't go down with his decade.

Such bad form, to outlive the craziness conferred on your life.

"They're saying to me now, 'People are getting tired of you bawling your head off, Joe, do something upbeat,'" he says, blinking sleep from his eyes, as the evening climbs into the sky over Thomas Circle and it is time for the concert to begin.

He is, of course, aware of the irony imbedded in that advice, after a career in which suffering was the fulcrum of his art. But now they want to introduce Joe Cocker to the '70s, a time whose tempo has less to do with madness than with making it. He's obliging — there are songs on his new album with titles like Fun Time, and he's on the album cover all bright and spiffy in a three-piece suit. But in person he is wearing a blue velour shirt and yellow pants and a fuzzy brown beard and he says that, as always, "I'm a sucker for the down-type material — it's what's always felt right."

And it's what sounded right on the albums, the songs of survival and of love lost and longed for — "Cry Me a River," "I Can Stand a Little Rain," "The Moon Is a Harsh Mistress," the sad songs planted carefully among the rockers and the scorchers.

Washington was the first stop of a cross-country tour that won't end until next month — the first tour in this country in nearly two years — and he is just a bit nervous about how many people will remember him out there, will know about the intensity and the strange spasmodic way in which it is expressed on stage, and how many instead will come because of the tales of tours past — the drunkenessess and vomiting on stage, the lost voice and forgotten words, the way he rose like some great mud-stained ghost, playing like a shadow after sundown.

But this time, they're taking it easy, taking care of Cocker. "I figure, if I get meself some sleep and vitamins and stay out of the bars, I'll be all right," he says with the same rueful smile, and he is getting a little help from his friends toward that end.

They're being very careful, says his new manager, Michael Lang, about the interviews and the number of people backstage at the concerts and the psychic condiments they bring with them, careful to allow for rest and positive reinforcement and to cushion the great black bruises that used to fuel the songs and seem now only to drown out the ability to cope. They've got him a new house in Santa Barbara, not like the old one where, Lang says, there were 10 bedrooms and troops of guests and no place for him to sleep.

"We take care of him and believe in him," Lang says "I think each small success encourages him. He was too open to what was vailable, there just weren't any limits. I think now Joe's enjoying being alive for a change."

In a sense, Cocker has always done what was expected of him. Back in the beginning of the decade, it was the drinking and the drugs and the drive into the dark night where artists have always had a notion that inspiration is to be found, and now, it is sipping hot lemonade and the support and encouragement of his young band whose members look about as decadent as a Saskatchewan wheatfield.

For a while, it had worked, and he was bright as a comet and they were all crazy about this strange young Englishman who sounded like an old black bluesman and scoured the country with a frenetic motley array of musicians and court jesters, Mad Dogs and Englishmen.

But he lost money on that tour that had made him so famous, and then there was the endless succession of bad deals and bad directions. "It was always the same," he says. "Every time they're so hopeful and they say it's going to be great this time and then it starts falling apart. They come up to you before the concert and they say, 'How are you feeling Joe, you all right Joe?' and you know it's not you they're worried about, it's them. It's enough," says Cocker, "to drive a man to drink."

Which it did, rather spectacularly, and led to great black depressions.

He is not down now. The goals are more modest. It is not superstar status he seeks, he says, just time to work with his new band, and learn a few chords and write a few songs of his own. "We're not on this tour to make money," he says. "We just want to show people we're back."

MARK TRAIL

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

It is the rare day when, at trick three, declarer knows, with absolute certainty, the distribution of each of the defenders' hands. Such was the case in today's deal, and declarer's knowledge pointed the way to the winning line of play.

East-West vulnerable.
South deals.

NORTH
♠ J 7 3
♡ 8 7 5 3 2
◇ K 10 6 5 2

WEST
♡ K J 6
◇ A 8 7 4 3

EAST
♠ K 10 9 8 6 4 2
◇ J

SOUTH
♠ Q 5
♡ A Q 10 9 4
◇ Q 9
♣ A K Q J

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	Pass	2 ◇	2 ♠
3 ♣	Pass	3 ♡	Pass
4 ♡	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Ace of ♠.

North's two-diamond response was a dangerous call, for the bid ran the risk that it might encourage partner to contract for an unmakable slam.

West led the ace of spades and at trick two shifted to the diamond ace. Then came another diamond, East discarding a spade as South won the trick with the queen. Declarer now paused for analysis.

From West's failure to continue spades, it was obvious that West had been dealt the singleton ace. From East's failure to ruff the second diamond lead, East was known to have no trumps in his hand. Hence West had been dealt exactly on spade, five diamonds and three trumps. Thus the remaining four cards had to be four clubs.

To trick four declarer led his ace of clubs and ruffed it. Then came the high king of diamonds, and on it South discarded his spade queen. A diamond was then ruffed by South, after which dummy's two remaining spades were discarded on South's king and queen of clubs. The jack of clubs came next, with dummy ruffing this lead. The board's remaining diamond was now ruffed by South.

Up to this point ten tricks had been played and South had won eight of them. His last three cards were the A-Q-10 of trumps, while West possessed the K-J-6 of trumps. To trick 11 South led the ten of trumps, West capturing the trick with his jack. West now had to lead a trump away from his K-6 into South's A-Q. And so declarer made the last two tricks and his contract.

Had declarer not "counted out" the distribution of West's hand, he would have attacked the trump suit immediately. And once he did so, he would have lost two trump tricks.

SOLUTIONS FRIDAY

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Astrological Forecast for Friday, October 13
By Sydney Omarr

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You're not trapped, merely delayed. You're on brink of discovery, revelation. Hospital visit should not be depressing. Aquarius, Scorpio, Taurus could figure in your personal scenario. Be still within — answer will be forthcoming.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Excitement of discovery is featured — you create, change, travel, write and you gain via written word. Gemini, Virgo, Sagittarius figure prominently — so could the number 5. An inquisitive person first makes you angry — then inspires you to do something constructive.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Fortify against demands which would smash budget. Family member, who has exquisite taste, will understand need for restraint. Reach agreement through talk, conference, mutual mediation. Peace can replace strife — if you so permit.

CANCER (June 23-Aug. 22): Accent on distance, travel, spirituality, stimulation of learning process. You gain by a study of semantics — define terms, be precise where word meanings are concerned. Specifically, you bring long-range project into current focus. You accurately perceive potential.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Get off sidelines — strive for direct participation. Make a commitment, take a stand, if single, accent is on agreement that leads to a permanent relationship. Married or single, sort out foolishness. Retain contentment, happiness — reject intrigue, double-dealing.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Emphasis on cooperative efforts, ties, partnerships. Be aware of public relations, responses to actions. Permit others to express views, announce decisions. Be discreet — play your own hand close to chest. Gather information for use another day. Finish rather than attempting to begin a project.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Strive to imprint your own style, mark. You have chance now to gain supporters, to pioneer a project. Leo, Aquarius persons figure prominently. Work is easier now because you're given more creative freedom. Young person expresses love — and means it.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Follow through on feelings — emotions dominate logic and could lead to "true" course. Your innate capabilities can now be successful: demonstrated. Accent on creativity, speculation, romantic pursuits. You could meet someone who is an expert in the culinary arts.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Decorate, diversify, check security measures, build on solid base. Another Sagittarian — and a Gemini — could figure prominently. Humor, versatility play key roles. Job in the home replaces recent gloom.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Obtain hint from Sagittarius message. Catch up on returning favors, extending invitations. Brothers, sisters, other relatives could dominate scene. You receive verification of transaction which promotes personal security.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Accent on getting ideas across in most economical manner. You can earn money through some good "horse trading." Means permit innate wisdom to shine — do what you do best and don't sell yourself short. Gemini, Pisces persons figure prominently.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): This is definitely not the time to be shy-and-retiring. Emerge from shell. Express, be original, independent. Others, especially family members, will make major concessions. Taurus, Libra, Scorpio persons figure prominently.

IF OCTOBER 13 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY . . . you never follow the crowd. You are an individual to your finger-tips. You rebelled early — you could have been physically or psychologically separated from one or both parents. Scorpio persons play key roles in your life. Greater freedom of thought, action indicated for you next month. Your travels, contacts, social gatherings soon going to pay dividends. You are not easy to know, but you are loyal, creative and a battler for the underdog.

Bette's Biggest Thrill In 50 Years. . .

NEW YORK — "One of the most exciting things that has happened to me in 50 years" was being kissed by U.S. President Jimmy Carter and Egyptian President Anwar Sadat, according to movie queen Bette Davis. She called her meeting with the two world leaders "one of those lucky, lucky accidents . . ." Miss Davis was in Washington, D.C., taping a segment for Dinah Shore's television show, a portion of which involved an interview with Rosalynn Carter. While combing her hair in a White House room near the Oval Office, she learned that Sadat was nearby. "I told the security man that I would at least like to look at him because I really think he's something else," she said. "The security man told him I was there and they made me stand in the hall. We met and we kissed each other. I also was kissed by President Carter in the Oval Office. I will thank Dinah Shore for that all of my life."

Bette Davis

HAMILTON — Albert (Bert) Grady, a former vaudevillian who once performed with the same troupe that produced Charlie Chaplin, has died at 93. Belfast-born, Grady was a member of the First World War acting group The Dumbells and performed in Hamilton vaudeville during the 1920s. In 1896, Grady, who began his entertainment career at age six, joined the Lancashire Lads, the group that spawned Chaplin's career. Grady said in a 1975 interview he felt he was as talented as Chaplin, but that his luck as a performer was not as good.

. . .Of Corsets True Love

GREENSBORO, N.C. — Fifty-four years ago, Levi and Vinnie Geer were divorced. But their love survived and this week they were married again.

"You should never give up," chuckled a tearful Levi in a telephone interview from the Washington suburb where he and Vinnie are living. "Never, never."

The two were married as teenagers on June 1920. But in September 1923, Geer's construction job ended and he moved away for work. Vinnie refused to go, and in 1924 they were divorced.

Their separate paths led them to Washington, D.C. She worked in a corset shop. He was still in construction work. Both had remarried, but Vinnie spotted Geer at his work in 1941.

"We had a reunion right there in the middle of a six-point intersection," Geer recalled. "The police were hollering at us to get in a parking lot or somethin."

Geer's second wife, Annie, and Vinnie got together a few days later when Vinnie spotted Geer's name on a cheque Annie wrote to the corset shop.

The two became close friends. "It was understood after I married Annie that I still loved Vinnie," Geer said. "But I was going to stay with her because I promised."

Vinnie left Washington and the two couples lost touch until Geer saw an obituary for her husband, John Drummond, in 1958. Then last March, Annie died of leukemia. The night before she died, she told Geer to find Vinnie.

GALLING PURCHASE

MELBOURNE (AP) — An Australian chemical company is doing a booming export business selling bovine gallstones to Europe and Southeast Asia as aphrodisiacs. The gallstones are crushed into powder for medicines.

ATLANTA — Evel Knievel is in an Atlanta hospital for minor surgery to drain an abcess from his right heel.

"We don't expect complications," said Ron Wolff of Northside Hospital.

NEW YORK — Lillian Carter says — with a big laugh — that New York Mayor Edward Koch "is the biggest liar I have ever seen." The mother of the U.S. president, in New York to campaign for a congressional candidate, was asked about a report by Koch that she won all the money in a 12-hour poker game on the flight back from the funeral of Pope John Paul I. First, she said, it was only a six-hour flight, adding, "How could I play for 12 hours? He exaggerated about all the winnings. When I checked up, I found I had lost a [illegible]"

NASHVILLE — Country singer Tammy Wynette has 30 days to answer a Circuit Court petition in which ex-husband and singing partner George Jones blames alcoholism for falling $36,000 behind in child support payments. Jones's lawyer, Jack Norman Jr., said Wednesday that Jones already had turned over $15,000 to the court clerk in partial payment but will need more time to gather the balance. "And as you can see in the petition, he says he is owed nearly that much by her in offsetting taxes," Norman said. Norman filed the petition in response to a suit filed for the money by Miss Wynette.

Trotsky's Slayer Ailing

MOSCOW — Ramon Mercader, convicted of killing Leon Trotsky in Mexico in 1940, is dying of bone cancer in Havana, his brother Luis said today.

Luis Mercader told a reporter that he hopes to fly to Havana shortly to visit his 65-year-old brother.

CALIFORNIA STOPOVER FOR MEG

LOS ANGELES — Princess Margaret arrived in Los Angeles on Wednesday for a visit during which she will christen a new Lockheed passenger airliner for British Airways.

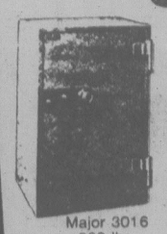

She was scheduled to travel to a Lockheed aerospace plant today in the California desert, about 65 kilometres from Los Angeles, for ceremonies dedicating the British airline's first L-1011-500 Tristar Jet.

The princess will spend several days in the Los Angeles area, visting friends and recuperating from a minor illness that developed in the South Pacific before she went to Japan, the British Consulate said.

She had become ill while preparing to take part in independence ceremonies for the new state of Tuvalu, formerly the Ellice Islands.

Great times are here again. And again.

With our Great Time Machine, any program is yours to enjoy again...and again.

Because you can record any show you're watching. Or record one show while watching another. Even tape shows you'd normally miss when you're not at home, by simply setting the built-in, easy-to-read digital timer.

Great features! But with Quasar, you also get up to 4 hours of uninterrupted recording...on one tape. And a pause control that lets you edit out unwanted material.

Greater still, Quasar offers all the features imaginable to make your own great times. Like an Audio Dubbing control that lets you change soundtracks on existing tapes. An optional Color or B&W camera, so you can make your own great movies and play them back instantly. And if you transfer your existing home movies to VHS tape, our Great Time Machine will play them, too.

If you think great times happen only once, see your Quasar dealer. He'll show you how to bring them back again... and again.

Mystery Killer Stalks Isle

40 Die in Day; Virus Blamed

MANILA, Philippines (UPI) — A mysterious disease in a remote island fishing village has killed at least 40 persons in 24 hours, health officials said Wednesday.

Dr. Edilberto Fernando, regional director of the Health Ministry, said the disease already has killed five per cent of the population of Pangil-Agan, a small island of 840 residents 440 miles south of Manila.

Fernando said an undetermined number of the island's residents had been stricken and that a five-man emergency medical team would fly to the village today to try to identify and isolate the disease.

"It's a mysterious disease," Fernando said. "Most of the victims suffered fever before they died Tuesday.

"We can't tell what this is all about but we're anticipating it might be a viral disease."

A small islet near Pangil-Agan was hit by a cholera outbreak last month.

At least 15 persons were killed, but a medical team airlifted to the area has been able to control its spread.

Fernando said the medical team will look into the sanitation situation in the area. He said an anti-malaria unit will conduct a separate investigation.

Fernando said a similar disease broke out at Pangil-Agan two years ago and an investigation found that disease was a combination of malaria and gastro-enterities.

Fernando will head the medical team which was scheduled to fly to Puerto Princesa, 350 miles south of Manila, where it will take an hour-long boat ride to the stricken village.

Two doctors, two nurses and a sanitary engineer on the team are bringing along anti-diarrhea and anti-malaria drugs, anti-dehydration fluids and antibiotics and other emegency drugs.

Fernando said the report of a disease outbreak was relayed to the health ministry in Manila by military authorities after local officials contacted them.

Meanwhle, in Cebu City, 350 miles southeast of Manila, authorities said 10 persons died and 48 others were hospitalized with respiratory ailments.

MILL OFFERS WATER

B.C. Forest Products mill officials today offered to supply water to Crofton residents plagued by an unsatisfactory domestic supply.

Mill manager George Bird said the company is willing to talk the matter over with North Cowichan council.

"We are ready to explore the matter," he said.

"We could supply residents with water during the winter but not during the summer months when we need it."

The mill pumps its water from the Cowichan River.

Bird said an agreement with North Cowichan would be subject to the municipality providing and installing the necessary equipment to connect up with the mill's water supply.

The best service in the game.

There are two things you can always count on when you rent an Avis car: fast efficient service at our counters, and a clean, reliable car.

We've made checking out and checking in as smooth and trouble-free as possible, because we know how important that is to you. We call our approach "counter intelligence."

And we've made a reputation for Avis cars as the cleanest in the business, because we know that's important to you, too.

We check and clean all cars thoroughly and regularly, and even leave the check-list inside so you can see what we've done.

Good service is more strongly associated with the Avis name than anyone else in the car rental business. And it didn't just happen. It's one more way we try harder.

Refugees Can Stay; Eat Again

TORONTO (CP) — Two families of Uruguayan refugees have ended their hunger strike after learning they will not be deported Friday.

The eight persons — a butcher, a steelworker, their wives, three teen-aged children and the mother of one of the men — had been on hunger strike in a Toronto church since Sunday to protest deportation orders against the two men.

The men say they would be in danger of imprisonment or death if they returned to Uruguay because of their former political activities in that country.

Desert Sands Yield Secrets

By THOMAS W. LIPPMAN
The Washington Post

CAIRO — The trackless deserts of southwestern Egypt, one of the most remote regions on earth, are beginning to yield their secrets.

American and Egyptian scientists, linked by satellite to communications facilities in Greenbelt, Md., have completed a 12-day trek through the region. They found major iron ore deposits, prehistoric cave paintings of African wildlife, tools and artifacts of the people who lived there when the land was fertile, and new information about the way deserts are formed.

From Kharga oasis, south of Assiut, the scientists traveled by jeep and dune buggy to Jebel Uweinat, a hill that rises near the point where Egypt, Libya and Sudan meet, a distance of almost 500 miles across sand dunes, rocks and craggy valleys created by rushing water in an earlier geologic age.

But the land is so little known and so poorly mapped that the scientists do not know exactly where they were. They will find out only when they see the charts of the signals they transmitted each day to a U.S. nimbus 6 satellite. From these they can determine what their positions were when the transmissions were made.

A local guide accompanied them, but participants said he was of little help in navigation because he is accustomed to crossing the desert at a camel's pace, judging location by time of day, and was disoriented by the speed of motorized travel.

The leader of the expedition was Farouk Baz, Egyptian-born research director of the Centre of Earth and Planetary Studies at the Smithsonian Institution in Washington.

The trek, he said, was "unbelievable, the best trip of my life. We're talking about an area that covers one tenth of Egypt and eveywhere you stop you see something significant — something that tells you about climatic change or the movement of sand or pre-Neolithic settlements or mineral deposits."

Among the discoveries, he said, were:

—Hand axes, grindstones, spearheads and the shells of cooked ostrich eggs clustered around depressions that were probably lakes millennia ago. Carbon dating of the eggshells, he said, will reveal when they were cooked, thus making it possible to say when man lived in the region.

—"Lovely cave paintings" of baboons, giraffes and other animals now found only south of the African Sahel desert, and paintings of faces with black African features.

—"Fabulous examples of things that will help us understand Mars." Satellite photos had shown the area to be intriguingly similar to areas on the planet Mars as photographed by the U.S. Viking spacecraft, and geologists in the expedition hope that by analyzing the wind andro patterns they found in the Egyptian desert they can learn more about the Martian surface.

—An eight-mile-long deposit of good quality iron ore, exposed by the desert winds that have worn away the covering rock. Egypt is self-sufficient in iron ore, but Gaz, a geologist by training, said there was more than enough to be commercially exploitable when present supplies dwindle.

Near the Sudanese border the scientists met a camel caravan of Bedouin traders making their 40-day trek to Egyptian markets with a salty substance called trona, which is mixed with chewing tobacco. "They were shocked and so were we," Baz said of this chance meeting in the empty wasteland.

Daytime temperatures went up to about 120 degrees Fahrenheit, Baz said, and the only living things the scientists met, aside from the caravan, were one scorpion and a few foxes that left tracks in the sand camp one night.

The 33-man expedition brought back nearly three tons of material for study, Baz said, but to him the most important result of the trip was a conclusion which he expects to cause furious argument within the scientific community.

The conclusion he said, is that the activities of man have little to do with the creation of deserts.

"Deserts are made by God, not man, and the effect of man on the process is minimal," he said.

Baz said the United Nations and other organizations are wasting millions of dollars on programs aimed at preventing overgrazing and deforestation in the belief that these contribute to the encroachment of desert onto arable land.

"You can see it in the rock," he said. "It wan't grazing by goats, eating away the shrubs, but erosion by the wind that did it." He said grasslands once flouriched in what is now the Egyptian desert and were destroyed not by man but by wind that dried up the water supply and eroded the soil and rock.

Near the Libyan border, he said one can actually see the hot wind from a vortex that eats away at the rock, gradually reducing it to more sand. The natural structures most resistant to this process, he said, are those with tapered tops, and he speculated that this phenomenon may have inspired the ancient Egyptians to develop the pyramid.

Baz said the papers prepared by the archeologists, botanists, geologists and geographers in the expedition will be published as a book next year. The artifacts, he said, probably will be housed in a museum in Kharaga.

For centuries the Egyptians, drawing sustenance from the Nile, simply ignored the desert, but there has been a sudden interest in it recently.

Oil exploration, overcrowding of the Nile valley and the prospective recovery of the Sinai Desert from Israel have combined to stimulate academic and scientific research into the possiblility of putting the empty wastelands to practical use.

In the southwest, Baz said a few of the remote valleys have enough ground water to support shrubs and tamarisk trees, but there is no record of any rainfall for 20 years. The scientists concluded, he said, that there was no possibility of reclaiming any of that part of the country for agriculture.

In fact, satellite photography and an earlier expedition by Baz into the northern part of the desert, closer to the Mediterranean coasts, have shown that Egypt — far from reclaiming the desert — is literally losing fertile ground to the advancing sands.

Artifacts Recovered

PARMA (AP) — Italian police have recovered stolen art works worth between $660,000 and $1.1 million and arrested two men.

The art items ranged from archeological pieces dating to the 4th century B.C. to Renaissance and Baroque paintings.

IT'S NOT SO WILD

BANFF, Alta. (CP) — Visitors to wilderness areas of Canada's national parks are better informed, better equipped and safer than those in the past, but they may be paying a price for those advantages, a national parks conference was told.

John Marsh, associate geography professor at Trent University in Peterborough, Ont., said recent progress in back country use and management has reduced some of the essence of the "wildlife experience."

"Some people argue that modern mountaineering with all its hardware is largely an engineering exercise rather than a test of physical ability."

Sophisticated equipment has made visitors more comfortable but it has removed them a little further from nature, he said.

Marsh said as society increases the protection and security of its members, people look for risks and even elements of fear, whether it is in hang-gliding, car racing, casinos or wilderness camping in mid-winter.

The risk in national parks has been greatly reduced by improved rescue techniques, education programs and the sheer number of visitors, he said.

Swiss Fish Stocks Nosedive

By ANDREW WARSHAW

GENEVA (AP) — Switzerland's lakes are so low in stocks of gourmet fish that restaurants are serving substitutes imported from as far away as Canada.

Experts blame pollution and unusually bad weather for the sudden decline which is forcing many restaurants to rely on imports.

Over-fertilization of the lake water, involving an excess of oxygen-consuming phospherous, nitrogen and other chemicals is the reason many leading Swiss experts believe supplies of the gourmet fish are reaching rock bottom.

"The oxygen which is vital to the lives of the fish is being used up by the algae whose growth is spurred by excess fertilization," says Heinz Ambuehl, professor of hydrobiology at Zurich University.

Worst hit by the over-fertilization is the small, central Swiss Greifensee, a lake near Zurich, Switzerland's largest city, Ambuehl said.

He also said that for the first time ever, experts have witnessed a zero rating of oxygen at the bottom of Lake Geneva, the largest supplier of Swiss gourmet fish. The lake, 72 kilometres long and almost 13 kilometres across at its widest, has a maximum depth of 1,017 feet.

A recent government report said the lake was in danger of suffocation unless its phosphate content, which has trebled in the last 15 years, is quickly lowered.

Arnold Martin, president of the Swiss Association of Professional Fishermen, said weather conditions, particularly heavy rains, led to the shortfall in Swiss lake fish supplies.

"Masses of water just poured into the lakes without plankton for the fish to feed on," he said, "Consequently, they just starved to death."

With the lack of perch, trout and other lake fish giving rise to even greater competition among the hundreds of restaurants for available stocks, and many eating places are getting over the problem by importing.

Hans Albers, owner of a leading lakeside fish restaurant in Geneva, says that in high season he sells 130 to 175 pounds of perch a day.

But now, he can get a maximum of only 4½ pounds of local fish a day and is importing, mainly from Canada.

Early in the summer, Albers imported a ton of perch from Canada and now is considering buying an additional two tons. He said he pays about $11,000 a ton for the imported perch.

But restaurants owners Roger and Mireille Fillistrof decided to close and go on vacation two months ahead of schedule — in the hope their return will coincide with the reappearance of the perch, trout and fera which have been the restaurant's speciality since 1949.

39 PERSONALS

SPECIAL FEMALE WANTED. A Lady of single status in her early forties who has raised her family or nearly so and is looking forward to a life of her own where the companionship of a gentleman of similar experienced would be desirable. Mutual assets should be well tempered disposition, intelligence, physical attraction, the desire for a relationship of some depth with respect for truth, beauty and harmony and a variety of interests such as literature, music, the pursuit of learning, the outdoors, dining and dancing and home life. Expressions such as discretion and confidence seem unnecessary as I feel the requirement here for sincerity and accuracy of presentation is self evident. Please respond to Victoria Press Box 326

WIDOWER STILL LOOKING for someone as nice as my wife who died two years ago. Am told I look much younger than 67, just under 6 ft. and have all my brown hair. Incurable romantic with many interests and hobbies, am affectionate and demonstrative and very lonely. Must have a very nice woman to worry over and look after. Have adequate steady income. Reply to P.O. Box 704, Duncan, B.C. V9L 3Y1.

MALE, 24, 6'1", 175 LBS., SENSE of humor, intelligent, attractive, looking for sincere relationship with loving intelligent woman, 19-25, who enjoys variety of sports and interests. I do not like using classified ads to meet you, but I like bars and discos even less. If you would like to give it a try, reply Post Office Box 6158 Station C.

LONELY LADY, ONE-MAN type of woman, non-smoker, non-drinker, healthy, likes home life, gardening, good music, travelling and the sea, would like to meet an active, silver-haired man, 60-75, who is financially secure to enjoy life with, on this beautiful Island. No triflers, please. Victoria Press, Box 308.

SINGLE MALE, LATE 20'S, successful, intelligent. Had it with the "Disco" scene! Enjoys the outdoors, travel, dancing, homelife. Wishes to meet young lady with similar interests and who would normally not answer such an ad. Victoria Press, Box 276.

MAN, 35 YEARS, REASONABLY attractive, well built, would like to meet lady who enjoys life and likes to have good times. Compatibility more important than age, or beauty. Will answer all. Victoria Press Box 278.

HOW TO WRITE A GOOD CLASSIFIED ACTION AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room, etc., for rent, or property for sale; start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably by giving complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement.

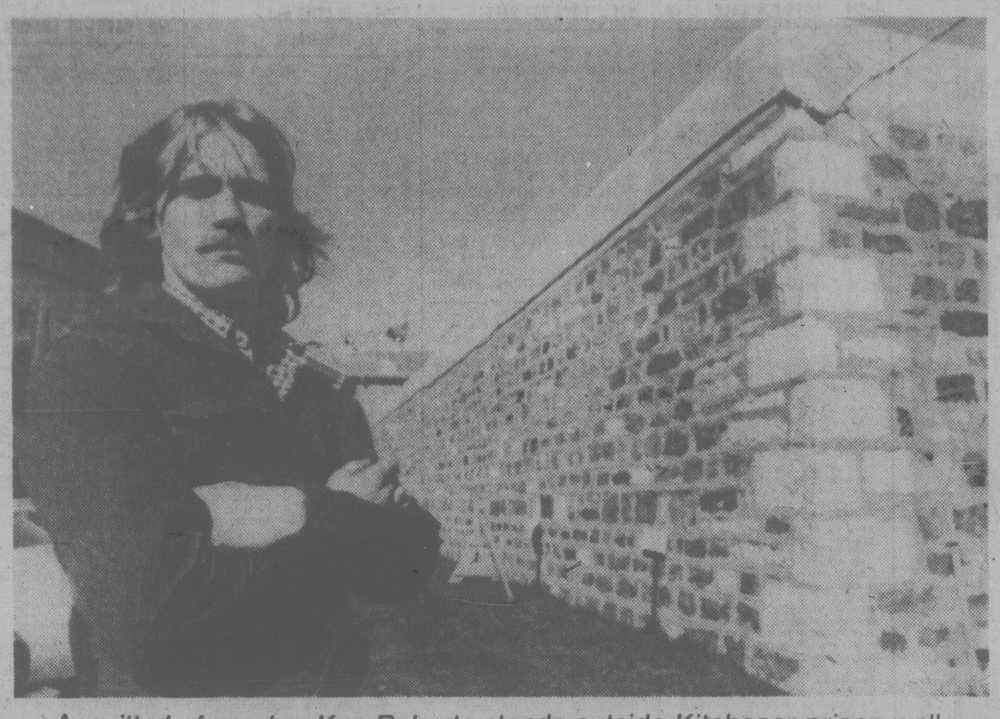

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address if you do not have regular hours; state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers love the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient advisor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. Monday through Friday, 8:00 to 5:30

Man Asks Compensation For 3½ Years in Prison

KITCHENER, Ont. (CP) — A Kitchener man convicted and later acquitted of murder is seeking compensation for the more than three years he spent in prison, his lawyers say.

Morris Manning of Toronto said he hopes to take the case of Ken Roberts, 22, before the Ontario Criminal Injuries Compensation Board and win.

He also said the case may set an important precedent in Canada for other persons wrongly convicted of crimes.

Roberts was imprisoned from June 10, 1974, to Dec. 22, 1977, after being convicted of murder in the death of Joanne Anstett, a 24-year-old Kitchener nurse.

Because of a dispute over some of the scientific evidence, however, Roberts won a retrial in the Ontario Supreme Court and the guilty verdict was overturned.

Roberts, who works in a box factory, has lived in Kitchener since his release from prison.

Manning said that although government officials feel the board's role is to compensate only victims of crimes, he feels Roberts has a legitimate case.

"Someone's responsible for taking those years away from me and how can I afford to sue anyone?" Roberts asked.

"They seem to be saying I wasn't a victim of crime. I was a victim of blind justice, so I don't get a penny."

Roberts conceded that it is difficult to know who to blame.

"Do you go after the federal government, the province, the City of Kitchener and the police?" he asked.

"Who's responsible and how much is compensation worth?"

Manning, who won Roberts's freedom, and lawyer Clayton Ruby, who argued successfully for a retrial, feel the least society owes Roberts is compensation for lost education opportunities.

When charged with the murder, Roberts was about to go back to school, which he had quit in Grade 11 to take a job.

Now he is taking part-time courses at the University of Waterloo, but said he wants to get his BA and cannot afford to go to school full-time.

Ruby said it is callous for the government to suggest persons such as Roberts should not be compensated.

"Where someone doesn't get off on a technicality, but proves he's innocent — as in this case — the state should have a moral obligation to undo the wrong," Ruby said.

"You can't compensate a person for spending 3.4 years of his most formative years in a hell-hole like Millhaven but to say he gets nothing is extremely harsh."

While awaiting the appeal decision, Roberts spent time in the Kitchener jail, the Toronto (Don) jail and Collins Bay and Millhaven penitentiaries in the Kingston, Ont., area.

Manning agreed with Ruby, saying Roberts and anyone else involved in similar cases should be compensated.

"Our liberties are only safeguarded if all technicalities involved in cases can be proved," Manning said.

"Police must have a pretty damn good case before they go into court and some form of compensation might help ensure that."

Meanwhile, Arthur Maloney, who recently resigned as provincial ombudsman to return to his criminal law practice in Toronto, said he doubts whether the economy could stand a system where people convicted and aquitted of crimes are compensated for time spent in jails or prisons.

He said, however, legal tradition has allowed governments to draft special acts to compensate people who have been incarcerated and then found innocent of a crime.

In cases where people are convicted and then win appeals on reasonable doubt, no such tradition exists.

Service Sunday For Rights Fighter

A private funeral service will be held Sunday for Byron Peter Johnson of Sooke, a well-known fighter for human rights and reforms.

He died Sunday in Victoria General Hospital at the age of 89.

Johnson, a former CCF and IWA organizer, was a member of the old Industrial Workers of the World, the Wobblies. He was a mining engineer and a cousin of Byron (Boss) Johnson, Liberal premier of B.C. from 1947 to 1952.

Born in 1889 in Victoria, he went to school in James Bay where his father owned a store.

When 13, he and his father went to the Klondyke during the gold rush. Later he was persuaded to return to school, and graduated from McGill University with honors in mining engineering in 1911.

Prior to the First World War, Johnson was in West Africa, overseeing mining operations on the Gold Coast.

He was wounded in France while serving in the army's tunnel division.

On his return to Canada, Johnson went back to work as a geologist and mining engineer, but was soon involved in political activity to improve the lot of the working man.

With the onset of the depression of the 1930s, he decided to work with his hands. He worked in the woods and helped organize the woodworkers.

He also helped organize the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation — the forerunner of the New Democratic Party.

Johnson spent most of his life in Sooke, living near the Sooke Potholes. His wife, Phyllis, predeceased him 18 months ago.

ARAFAT'S A MOVIE HERO WITH HELP FROM CANADA

By PAUL WHITELAW
Times News Services

OTTAWA — Yasser Arafat, a movie hero.

That's not as improbable as it may sound thanks to the United Nations and, reluctantly, some financial assistance from the Canadian government.

The Palestinian terrorist leader will be featured later this year in a lauditory UN documentary and red-faced officials of the External Affairs department are taking pains to explain that Ottawa is unable to opt out of sharing production costs.

Taxpayers in Canada will contribute an estimated $27,000 to the effort.

That's because the UN General Assembly's so-called "automatic majority" of Third World and Communist countries outvoted Canada, the United States and a number of other western countries to go ahead with the campaign.

Canada is committed to meet 3 per cent of the UN's total annual expenditures, explains an External Affairs spokesman.

"Canada's commitment to the UN is a full commitment," the spokesman said Wednesday night. "We can't withdraw from specific UN activities we don't believe in."

Explains another Canadian official: "Our financial commitment to the UN is something like taxes; you can't pay only those taxes you want to pay. How would the UN function?"

Despite the embarrassment caused by the Arafat film and the PLO propaganda campaign, the spokesman for External Affairs said the Canadian government had no plans to make its contributions "conditional" on approval of specific UN projects.

The Soviet Union has long followed a "conditional" approach, opting out of such UN budgetary items as the support of peacekeeping forces which it has opposed.

Slashing Canada's UN contribution by $27,000 — the estimated share of the propaganda campaign — would amount to a moral victory for the Russians and their approach to UN f inancing, explained one UN veteran in New York.

Despite opposition from the United States Congress, the administration of President Jimmy Carter has decided to pay it's estimated share of the campaign — more than $175,000.

The administration headed off a move in Congress to withhold UN funds from the prject and proposed, instead, that Congress merely go on record as expressing its opposition. In a compromise, Congress voted to "direct" the American ambassador to the UN, Andrew Young, to "use all means at his disposal" to have the UN General Assembly halt the propaganda operation.

The Arafat film will cost about $80,000.

An original production outline prepared earlier this year envisaged the use of PLO film footage showing the terrorist group launching raids on Israel. The producer hoped to get Arafat to explain and justify the attacks.

A UN spokesman said Wednesday the film unit has assembled "rough" material, but that no final decision has been taken on the final content of the production.

The film unit does have a deadline. It is hoped by UN secretariat officials that it will be ready for showing on Nov. 29, declared by the UN to be "International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People."

University To Honor Berger

WINNIPEG (CP) — Mr. Justice Thomas Berger, who headed the Mackenzie Valley pipeline inquiry, is to receive an honorary Doctor of Laws degree during the University of Manitoba's annual fall convocation.

Berger, a member of the British Columbia Supreme Court, has been a lawyer, judge and politician in addition to his work in the North and on the B.C. royal commission on family and children's law.

A former member of Parliament and the B.C. legislature, he was involved as a lawyer in commercial, corporate, criminal, labor and aboriginal rights cases.

Crashes By Smog

SAINT JOHN, N.B. (CP) — At least five minor traffic accidents were attributed to a cloud of acrid smog which blanketed parts of west Saint John this morning, police said.

A spokesman said the mishaps, involving 11 vehicles, were reported while residents were trying to drive to work at rush hour through the dense smog along a number of major arteries.

He said many motorists simply stopped their cars because they could not see further than four feet ahead.

Meanwhile, David Sillipant, director of the provincial environment department's pollution control branch, said it appeared the condition was caused by thick fog and an inverted layer of air which prevented industrial pollutants from being dispersed into the atmosphere.

Boy, 13, Charged After Hospital Fire

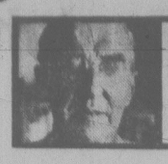

OTTAWA (CP) — A 13-year-old boy has been charged with arson after a $100,000 fire to the Royal Ottawa Hospital last week, police said today.

Fifty-six persons were evacuated from the hospital because of the fire; no one was injured.

GARDENING
jack beastall

What is this you are doing?

Sure I can see; you're burning leaves. Why?

To get rid of the things. Do you remember complaining last spring that your soil was no good? Is it any better now?

It isn't? Was it ever any better?

Never any good, you say.

How long have you been gardening at this place?

Twenty-five years! That's a long time. And you tell me the soil hasn't improved. A pretty poor kind of gardening that doesn't improve the soil in a lot less than 25 years.

Why not let them stay on the soil, or dump them over there on vegetable patch and throw a bit of soil over them? It wouldn't be any more work than raking them into heaps, loading them in the wheelbarrow and pushing it out here.

If I remember rightly, you were the fellow with the anti-pollution petition, going from house to house trying to get signatures a few months ago. You wanted the power and telephone lines put underground because, you said. They polluted your view.

Well, what do you think about covering the neighborhood with all this smoke and smell. Don't you think that is more "polluting" than a power pole?

By the way, what is all that long, brown stuff down there on the beach?

You say it is kelp and you've been trying to get the municipality to clear it away because it pollutes a beautiful beach.

Did you ever think of clearing it yourself and putting it on the garden to improve your soil?

You haven't? Well try it sometime.

With all that valuable material right at your door you should have the best soil in the district by now.

What does your wife do with all the kitchen peelings, tea leaves and stuff?

Sure, just as I suspected; puts it in the garbage can or the incinerator. Why don't you put all that stuff into the garden or make a compost heap?

You feel the neighbors might object? Object to what? There is nothing objectionable to burying discarded plant wastes and kitchen wastes, especially when those wastes will decompose and make new soil.

Now listen to me for a minute. All your objections are just excuses.

You would sooner spend time complaining about your poor soil than spend a lesser amount of time improving it. Already you've spent 25 years complaining.

I imagine the neighbors would be happy to see you improving your soil and stop complaining.

All you have to do is dig a trench about three feet long in the vegetable garden, dump the kitchen waste, the floor sweepings, and the hair you comb from your head, into the trench.

Sprinkle a little fertilizer over the mass, cover it with the soil from another three feet of trench, and the whole lot will rot down and make you some good soil. Do that every day and you won't have cans full of garbage to cause more pollution.

What' that? You're doing your best to keep the place neat and tidy?

So you should. But if you keep burning instead of burying you won't have any place to keep clean in another 10 years.

Well, I have to run along. Got a publication deadline to meet.

Not Nude But a Bit Naughty

ST. PAUL, Alta. (CP) — A two-week RCMP internal investigation into allegations that four officers were seen running naked through the halls of a Bonnyville, Alta., motel has found the claims to be not entirely accurate.

However Insp. John Hart, of the RCMP subdivision in this community, said Wednesday the men will be disciplined though the incident, which occurred Sept. 19 in the nearby town about 200 kilometres northwest of Edmonton, was "not as serious as it was made out to be."

The investigation was sparked by reports that the officers, all of the St. Paul sub-division, and a woman were seen drunk, making noise and running naked through the halls back and forth to the motel's whirlpool.

Hart would not comment on the incident except to say the men were not running through the halls naked and they were not on duty.

Montreal on Skids: Study

OTTAWA (CP) — Montreal is failing as a major economic centre and appears destined to lose more of its activities to Toronto and Vancouver in the near future.

That is one conclusion of a study of urban systems released today by the Economic Council of Canada.

Its author, Michel Boisvert of the University of Montreal, also singles out St. John's, Nfld., Chicoutimi, Que. and Sudbury, Ont., as cities slipping into economic decline.

He says the Prairies, which have until now been without a clear economic centre, will soon see the clear emergence of the Calgary-Edmonton strip as their economic focal point.

The study was done to provide the government with a basis for dealing with regional disparities.

Boisvert says only two cities, Montreal and Toronto, can be considered first-order development poles. But Vancouver was quickly becoming one as it gave up more of its port activies and concentrated on establishing industrial satellites in the Okanagan Valley.

Montreal, on the other hand, is losing its grip on future development because the city centre has an over-concentration of activity and its satellites are poorly equipped to relieve economic pressure.

One reason for that is the city's autoroute and mass-transit systems have proved inadequate to disperse manufacturing, Boisvert says.

Humor Demonstrated

OTTAWA (CP) — About 200 federal government French teachers staged a peaceful and sometimes humorous demonstration on Parliament Hill Wednesday to protest the loss of their jobs.

Carrying signs predicting the end of bilingualism in the government, the protesters marched on Parliament Hill about an hour after the reading of the throne speech.

About 500 teachers and support staff of the federal language training program are to lose their jobs April 1, 1979 as part of the government's attempt to cut its expenses. A saving of $12.5 million is expected.

Leading the marchers was a man wearing a mask resembling the face of Prime Minister Trudeau. The costumed man read excerpts from Trudeau speeches extolling the virtues of bilingualism within the public service and elsewhere.

After each quotation, a man dressed as Robert Andras, treasury board president, chopped the head off a dummy bearing such labels as "bilingualism" and "national unity."

The demonstrators, who were closely watched by uniformed RCMP officers, were later addressed by Gerard Laprise, Social Credit MP for the Quebec riding of Abitibi.

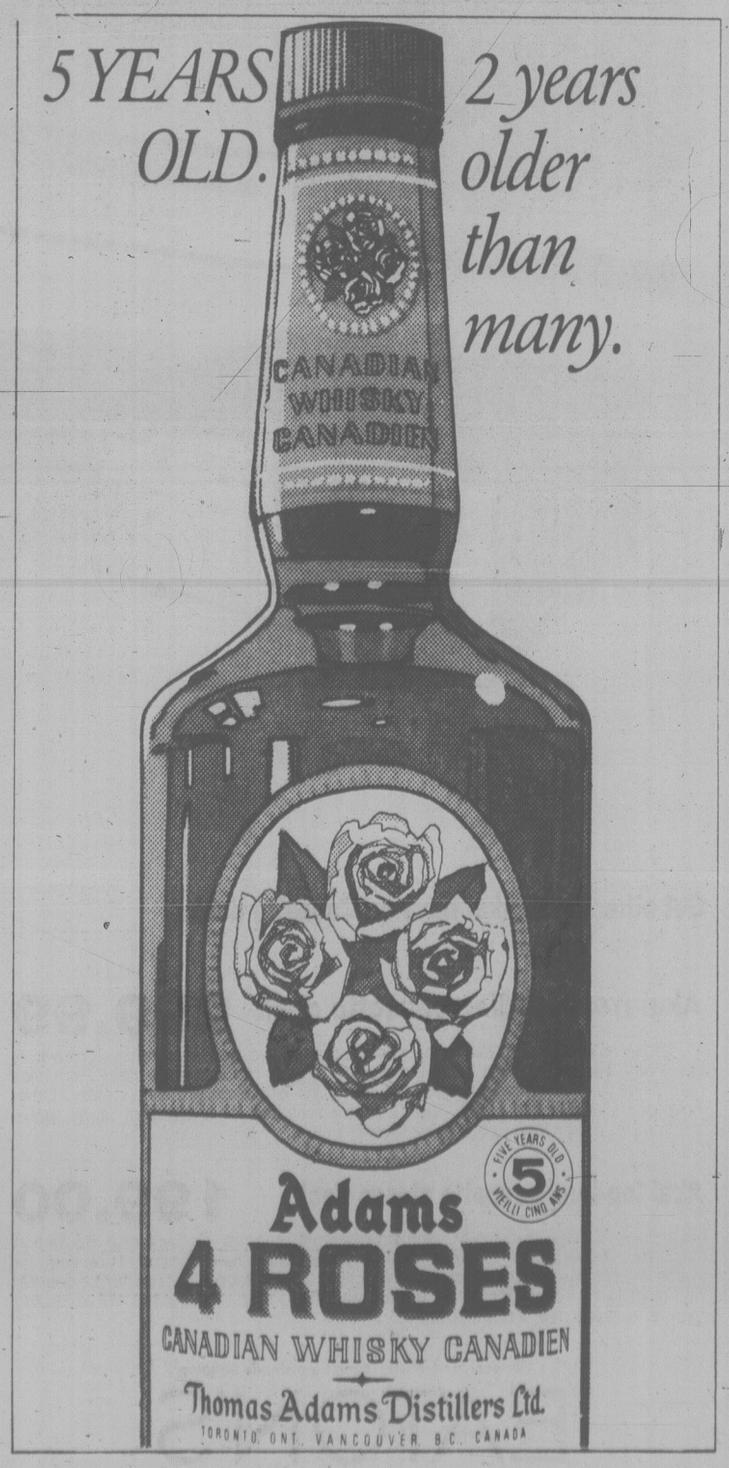

It was originally intended the schools be closed in 1983 but the majority now will close next spring.

Making Waves

To Boost Production

MOSCOW (AP) — High-frequency sound waves may increase Russian grain production, says Professor Vladimir Dorofeyev of the Nikolai Vavilov Plant Breeding Institute in Leningrad.

Dorofeyev told Tass, the Soviet news agency, his experiments show high-frequency sound waves triple the yields of some cereals and cause quicker germination and greater frost resistance in others.

Cardinals Narrowing Their Hunt

Times News Services

VATICAN CITY — The Roman Catholic cardinals who will choose a successor to Pope John Paul I say they have narrowed their search and are debating the specific merits of a small group of candidates.

Church sources and statements by the cardinals themselves indicate they want a theological conservative who values traditional doctrine and discipline, as well as a man who can control the unwieldy Vatican bureaucracy.

Church experts say two cardinals among the papal candidates who fit that mold are Giuseppe Siri, 72, archbishop of Genoa and 25 years a cardinal, and Pericle Felici, 67, prefect of the Vatican Court of Appeals.

The experts cautioned, however, that Giovanni Cardinal Benelli, the powerful former Vatican diplomat most instrumental in electing John Paul, could not be counted out.

Also being considered were the so-called "pastoral" candidates: Corrado Cardinal Ursi, 70, archbishop of Naples, and Salvatore Cardinal Pappalardo, 60, archbishop of Palermo.

After two weeks of formal discussions at the Vatican and a weekend of informal and frank talks, however, the cardinals have been pointing more toward a capable administrator than a pastoral archbishop.

Meanwhile, trying to avoid past confusion and criticism, the Vatican said Wednesday it will adopt a new method for raising the smoke signals that announce the results of voting in papal elections.

Unlike the last conclave Aug. 26, the first minute of smoke will use only Italian Army flares, Vatican radio said. After 60 seconds the ballots and notes of 111 cardinal electors will be burned, as before, raising the possibility that the color may then change.

Vietnam Veterans Seeing Orange

WASHINGTON (AP) — About 500 Vietnam War veterans have filed disability claims for ill effects allegedly suffered from exposure to the herbicide Agent Orange, the U.S. Veterans Administration said Wednesday.

Officials said they don't know yet if the herbicide has actually damaged the health of servicemen in Vietnam, and only eight claims have so far been allowed.

Agent Orange was sprayed over the jungles of Vietnam from planes and helicopters to kill trees which provided cover for North Vietnamese and Viet Cong soldiers.

General Garth Dettinger, deputy surgeon general of the U.S. Air Force, said 52 million pounds of herbicide containing the toxic chemical dioxin was spread in Vietnam from 1961 to 1971, but there is no evidence so far of any lasting health damage to anyone.

Exposure to dioxin in industrial accidents has resulted in a temporary skin lesion, nausea, diarrhea, fatigue, headaches, backaches and lack of sex drive.

Crane Topples, Plunges 27 Floors to Street Level

DALLAS (UPI) — Crane operator Bob Carter, still confused and shaken, wandered about the site where a 10-ton crane had embedded itself 3 inches deep in a busy downtown street after a 27-storey fall.

His friend and co-worker, Kenneth Carl Branch, operator of the fallen crane, had been crushed and decapitated three hours earlier Wednesday when the machine toppled over the side of One Dallas Centre.

Carter, walking slowly and staring red-eyed, remained at the site until the sun was disappearing behind the skyscrapers and supervisors ordered the site vacated for the night.

Branch, 37, of Tyler, Texas, had been raising a bucket of concrete to the top of the building when his rig snapped from its moorings, toppled over the side and banged against the eighth, ninth and 10th floors before smashing into St. Paul Street at about 3:30 p.m. — just before the downtown area became filled with rush hour traffic.

Workers had to use cutting torches to remove Branch's remains and dismantle the wrecked crane.

A police spokesman said no other deaths or injuries were reported in the accident but a witness in a ground floor office said a red light had stopped three lanes of traffic less than 100 feet from where the crane crashed.

Witnesses said the crane landed about 2 feet from a parked taxi.

"I looked up and I saw that guy stick his head out that door trying to get out. It leaned over and I thought it wasn't going to fall. Then I saw that guy lean his head out. I guess he knew it was going to fall," Jones said.

"He definitely was trying to get out. He was a brave man. He didn't holler once. He was still in there when it hit the ground."

Save-Seal Sit-In Slated

KIRKWALL, Scotland (UPI) — The government has refused to call off its seal slaughter in the Orkney Islands, but animal lovers hope they can save the lives of 5,000 pups and cows with a sit-in on the barren rocks where the gray seals live.

Bruce Millan, the British government's secretary for Scotland, rejected a late appeal Wednesday to save the creatures because he said he does not believe there is a scientific case for calling off the hunt.

Fishery experts say the gray seals gobble up $40 million worth of fish every year, enough to keep three Scottish fishing ports in business. The government has approved a cull of about one-twelfth of the herd of 60,000 seals.

No firm date has been fixed for the slaughter, however, and the conservationists still think they can win.

Millan said he will not risk confrontation with the protesters and endanger human life. So the seals' main champions, members of the California-based Greenpeace Organization, hope they can prevent the slaughter by occupying the barren and uninhabited rocky outcrops off northern Scotland.

"If the sealers are ordered not to go on any island where there are protesters, we will pack every one of them," said Greenpeace spokesman Pete Wilkinson. "What will they do then?

"I honestly believe we can stop the cull going ahead."

The government's hired crew of Norwegian marksmen have been ordered to shoot 4,000 seal pups and 1,000 breeding seals. The seals eat an estimated 65,000 tons of fish annually, and plans call for a gradual 50 percent cut in the Orkneys' seal population by 1984.

The hunters say many of the seals would starve and die anyway because there are no longer enough fish to feed them all.

Newspaper and television pictures of cuddly baby seals with pleading brown eyes have provoked a national outcry by animal-lovers.

As both sides waited for action, a tag match continued between the government's sharpshooters, cruising the North Sea in their bright red ketch Kvitungen, and the conservationists aboard Rainbow Warrior, a green trawler with a rainbow painted on its side.

Plant Probed in Death Poser

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — A federal magistrate has authorized a search of a Dow Chemical Co. plant in Pevely, Mo., to determine the levels of chemicals suspected in the deaths of two persons and the serious illness of two more.

Magistrate David Noce issued the warrant allowing the Occupational Safety and Health Administration to search for the presence of methyl bromide and methyl chloride, suspected causes of the deaths of Bonnie Boyer and her son, Barry.

Authorities have speculated that uncured insulation found in the Boyer home and stolen from the Dow plant caused the deaths of Mrs. Boyer and her son as well as the serious illness of Robert Boyer and his daughter, Tonya.

OSHA applied for the search warrant after one of its representatives was denied admittance to the plant Tuesday. Noce delayed execution of the warrant pending a hearing scheduled for today at which Dow officials are expected to respond.

Dow has denied that its insulation could have been involved in fatal doses of the two chemicals which were found in the home in studies made by the Environmental Protection Agency.

Mrs. Boyer, 36, was found dead inside the home Sept. 19. Her husband was found dazed and their two children were found unconscious. Barry died two days later, and Boyer and Tonya are recuperating from serious illness.

Boyer has said a relative took the uncured insulation to the unfinished Boyer home a few days before Mrs. Boyer's death.

Time Has Tarnished Soviet Memories of Khrushchev

MOSCOW (AP) — Some Russians still place small bunches of flowers on his grave, but time has not been kind to the memory of Nikita Khrushchev, deposed 14 years ago this weekend.

Visitors to the grave in a corner of Novodevichy cemetery are quick to move on, almost embarrassed to be seen at the gravesite of the former premier.

"The only thing I can say is that he left no one indifferent," Khrushchev's computer-engineer son Sergei said at his father's simple funeral in 1971. "There are people who love him, and people who hate him, but no one can pass him by without turning to look."

Khrushchev's widow, Nina Patrovna, now 78, lives on a small pension in a villa outside of Moscow. Their daughter Rada is still deputy editor-in-chief of the magazine Science and Life, the job she held when the other leaders of the party met secretly in Moscow on Oct. 14, 1964, to purge her father.

Khrushchev had been first secretary of the party since 1953 and premier since 1958. Leonid Brezhnev succeeded him as party chief and now has been in power three years longer than his predecessor. The purged leader died in peaceful obscurity seven years ago at the age of 77.

Khrushchev's de-Stalinization program three years after the death of Josef Stalin in 1953 deserves remembrance from the historians, Russian intellectuals say.

He dismantled Stalin's regime of terror that took an estimated 80 million lives through executions, concentration camps and famine resulting from botched agricultural planning. At a party congress in 1956 he denounced the old dictator and his despotism, and de-Stalinization spread to the rest of the Soviet bloc.

"For that alone, the country should forgive him," one intellectual said.

But many Russians are slow to remember Khrushchev's achievements and quick to recall his failures.

"Khrushchev?" replied one woman when asked her feelings toward him. "That was the guy who wanted to plant corn everywhere, and then everything went to hell."

Most persons interviewed recalled him with a certain air of contempt, a man full of "hare-brained schemes" that never worked out.

Space: A Place To Work

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — President Carter announced Wednesday a blueprint for United States civil space policy over the next decade and said there would be no commitment to schemes like the costly Apollo moon shot program.

The policy, developed during a four-month inter-agency review, will reflect a balanced strategy of applications, science and technology development, a White House statement said.

More and more, it said, space was becoming a place to work. In the future, activities would be pursued in space when it appeared that national objectives could most efficiently be met through space activities.

"It is neither feasible nor necessary at this time to commit the United States to a high-challenge space engineering initiative comparable to Apollo," the statement said.

The $26 billion Apollo program, launched by President Kennedy, was aimed at putting a man on the moon.

The White House statement added, however, that "The United States will maintain a position of leadership in space science and planetary exploration. . ."

Boeing Shows Jumbo-Plus

RENTON (AP) — The Boeing Co. Wednesday unveiled a mockup of the twin-aisle interior of the firm's new 767 jetliner which will provide more seat room for passengers.

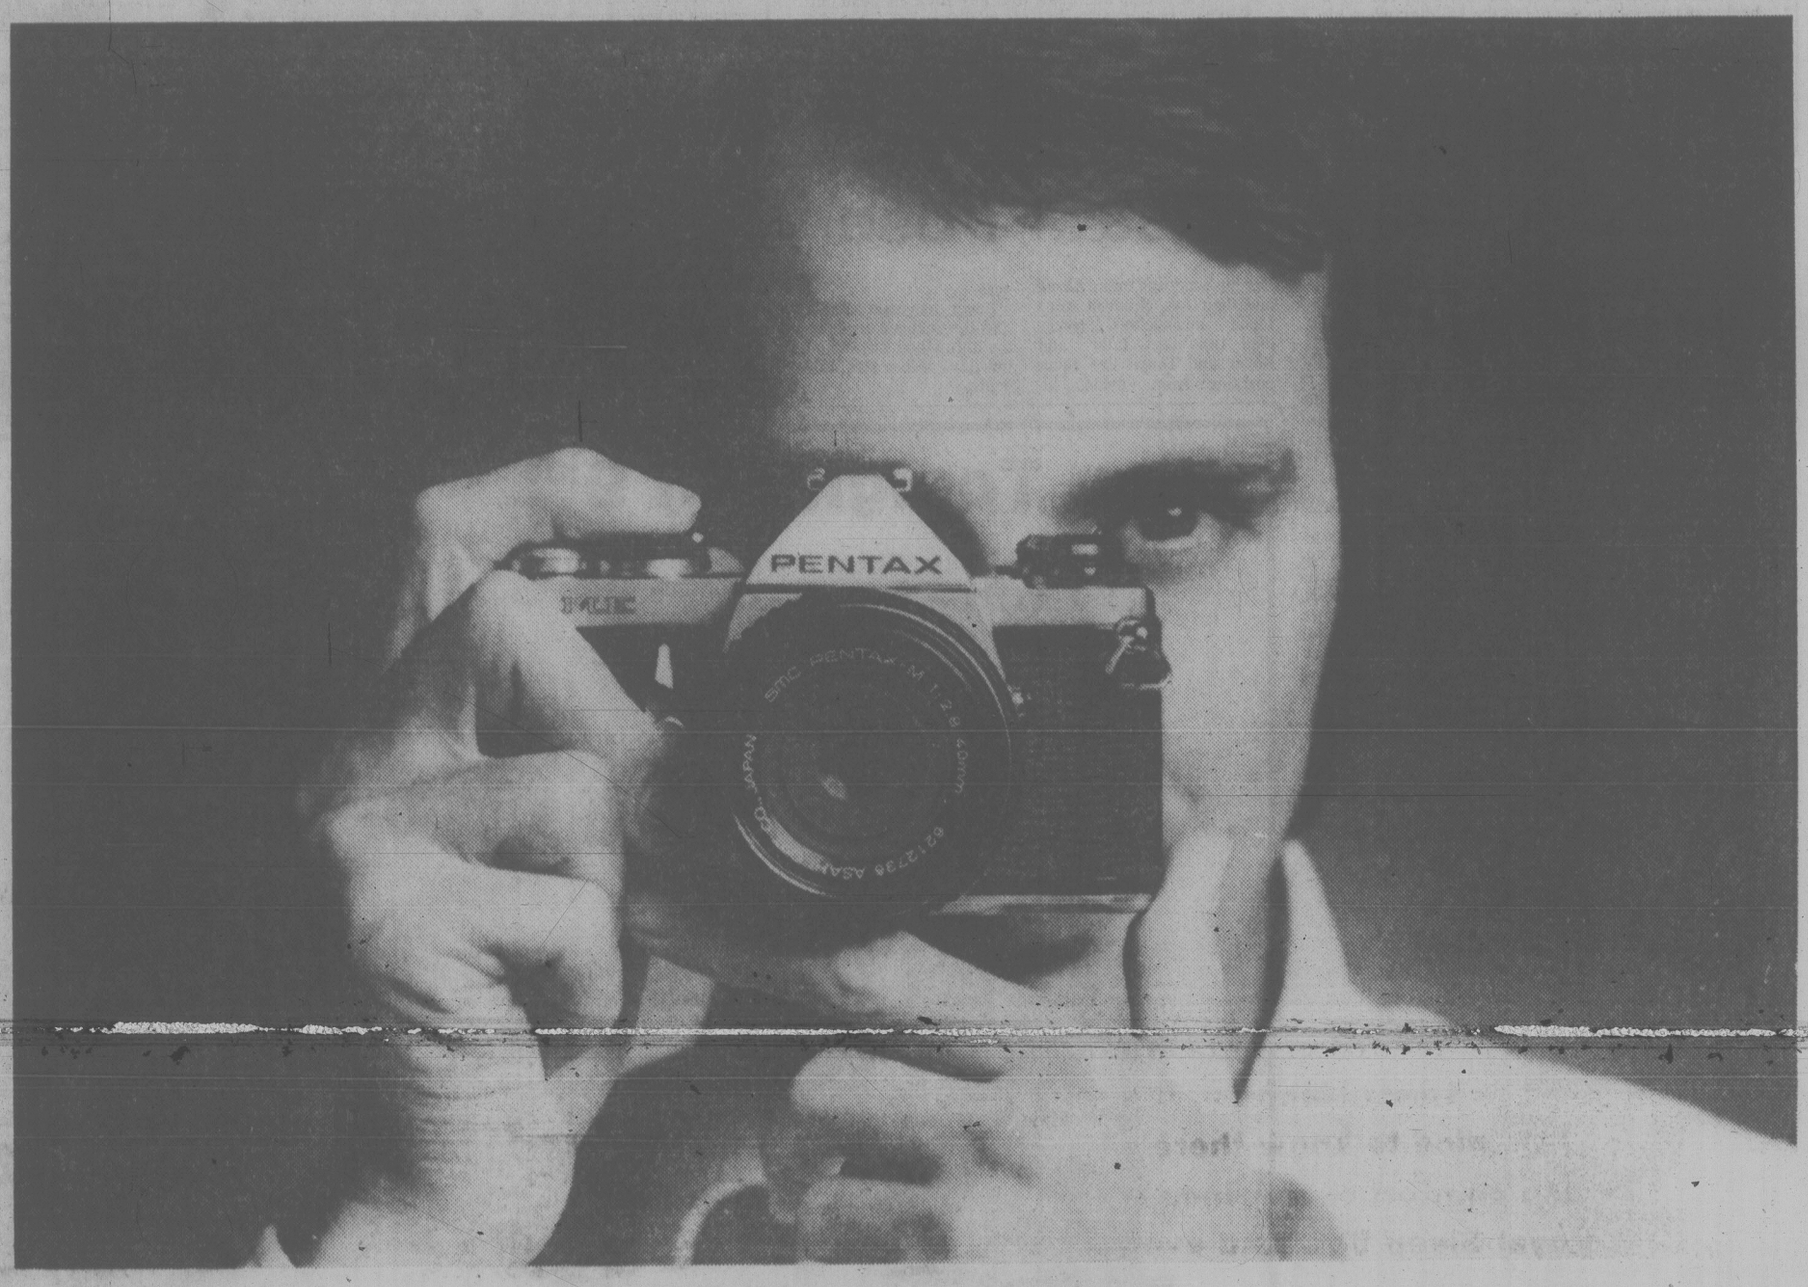

First-class passengers will sit six abreast, in pairs of two, and tourist-class passengers seven abreast, two-three-two.

The seven abreast tourist class seats are about one inch wider than those on standard body airlines, a Boeing spokesman said. The 767 also can be fitted with eight abreast seating for high-density charter or short-haul flights, the spokesman said.

The Mexican Pipeline For Heroin Plugged

Washington Post

MEXICO CITY — Mexican police have arrested Jaime Herrera, the head of a Mexican-American smuggling family regarded as the chief distributor of heroin from Mexico to the United States, authorities announced Wednesday.

After hunting Herrera for almost a year, Mexican narcotics agents finally tracked him down and arrested him in Guadalajara on Tuesday, the Mexican Fedral Police said.

By grabbing Herrera, U.S. and Mexican narcotics officials feel they will be able to crack a vast and sophisticated drug network they believe is responsible for bringing to the United States 3,000 pounds of heroin a year, more than a quarter of the total available across the country.

The Herrera network is believed to involve close to 1,000 persons, including family members, associates and friends on both sides of the border.

American narcotics agents have known about the operation for about four years. Herrera's arrest warrant was issued in Mexicao late last year for "possession, supply and processing of heroin."

According to agents close to the case, 67 indictments are pending in the United States against members of the Herrera family.

Under extremely strict security arrangements, Herrera was taken Wednesday to Durango, the capital of the northern state of Durango, where agents say the Mexican branch of the family had its base.

The family began to grow opium poppies about 25 years ago in Durango's uninhabited Sierra Madre Occidental, which proved to be a perfect spot for harvesting the opium, transporting the gum and processing it into heroin in safe houses.

Opium had come to Mexico several decades earlier with the arrival of Chinese railroad builders on the West Coast.

The Herreras started off dealing in limited quantities within the security and trust of a family business. Mexican police say they could never prove it, but they bleive early on the Herreras started financing small farmers to grow their opium crops for them.

Then the Herreras branched off into setting up their own laboratories for processing the gum and began to move the powder into the United States, police said. At first it was only sent to Chicago, where other members of the family set up shop, police said.

Recently, the operation was said to supply 60 per cent of the total heroin supply in the Chicago area. Between 60 and 70 per cent of all heroin supplied to U.S. addicts comes from Mexico, according to U.S. narcotics agents.

In recent years, as the Turkish-French connection started drying up and at the same time the number of heroin users in the United States increased, the Herrera operation grew dramatically.

"The formula for their success and their long survival has been that they have a higher degree of discipline than most organizations," said an experienced U.S. agent. "They learned on the job, grew slowly, stayed close-knit. They are very hard to penetrate. Anyone new had to be voted for and watched by people on the inside."

Another secret of their success has been the ingenuity with which they smuggled the heroin from Mexico into the United States, most of it going overland, almost invariably by car. "They've not only been good about their hiding places, but they took little risk. Because they're big, they wouldn't worry about losing a load."

Peyote Use Ruled Legal

REPUBLIC, Wash. (AP) — Members of the Native American Church in Washington may legally use peyote as part of church sacraments, despite a state law prohibiting its use, Ferry County Superior Court Judge Bill Kohls ruled Wednesday.

Kohls made the ruling in dismissing charges against three men arrested for possession of peyote on Aug. 30.

Kohls heard from witnesses who said the Native American Church was founded on the use of peyote and has been using the drug during services for more than 300 years.

Introduced was evidence indicating that the Colville Chapter of the Native American Church has been granted tax-exempt status as a church by the state. The charter, signed by Secretary of State Bruce Chapman, says the church promotes "morality, sobriety, industry, charity and right living . . . through the sacramental use of peyote."

STRIKING TONIGHT

Montreal CUPW Jumps the Gun

Times News Services

Inside postal workers in Montreal, Canada's second-largest post office, will jump the gun on an Oct. 16 national strike deadline and walk out at midnight.

"The pickets are ready, the strike headquarters are all set. We're out tonight," said Marcel Perreault, president of the 4,500-member Montreal local of the Canadian Union of Postal Workers.

Perreault said "it is very possible" that CUPW members in other Canadian centres also would walk out before the Monday strike deadline set by CUPW national leaders.

In Ottawa, post office troubles were a priority topic at today's cabinet meeting.

Postmaster-General Gilles Lamontagne would not say what recommendations he took to the full cabinet, but said the matter would be under heavy discussion.

A special cabinet committee met Wednesday to plot the government's next move in its dispute with the inside workers. Included in that strategy meeting was Bill Kelly, the federal labor department's top mediator and a key figure in the post office's recent settlement with the Letter Carriers Union of Canada.

Perreault said his local, second in size to the local in the Toronto post office, had voted 83.4 per cent in favor of the walkout. Members of the Toronto local, he said, were scheduled to hold a strike vote Sunday.

The 23,000 CUPW members last staged a national walkout in 1975 when they closed down the mail system for six weeks.

Perreault refused to indicate whether CUPW members might defy back-to-work legislation saying, "If there is a law, we will read it and reflect on it."

"This is a legal strike and even (Prime Minister Pierre) Trudeau has said that the right to strike is a democratic right," he said.

The CUPW's last contract expired June, 1977, Perreault said, "and our last pay increase was July 1, 1976." The union has received automatic cost of living increases since that date.

Bennett Beaten To Punch

VANCOUVER (CP) — The $160 million Robson Square development was declared officially open twice Wednesday while debate continues over the use of sound in the city's newest landmark.

The two-block development contains courtrooms which won't be completed until next year, but a section that includes the square, restaurants and an outdoor ice skating rink has been finished.

The square was to have been opened by Premier Bill Bennett, but New Democratic Party MLA Alex Macdonald, whose party started the development before being defeated in 1975, beat him to it.

About 10 minutes before Bennett arrived, Macdonald, wearing a kilt and accompanied by highland dancers and a piper, walked onto the dias along with Gary Lauk (NDP-Vancouver Centre) and took over the microphone.

"This shouldn't be a political event," said Macdonald, who declared the square open and left.

In making the formal opening later, Bennett faced a group of white-masked protesters who shouted "useless, useless, useless." The group handed out pamphlets protesting lack of public participation in planning the square.

The square has also created a controversy over the use of sound to mask noises and create some privacy between workers in an open building.

Professor Barry Truax of Simon Fraser University's department of communications said he was worried that it would create problems for office workers exposed to it for lengthy periods. He said he has heard that some workers were booking off sick and complaining of headaches.

Louis van Blankenstein, Robson Square project manager, said it was an integral part of the building's open landscape design, which makes use of partitions, rather than solid walls, to separate office workers.

Hike by Hydro Will Be Fought By Bennett, Wolfe

Premier Bill Bennett said today he will oppose any move by B.C. Hydro to increase electrical and natural gas rates next year.

"I'm opposed to increased rates for our consumers," he said.

The premier stated his opposition after Hydro spokesman George Barnett warned Wednesday that electricity rates could jump by 15 per cent and natural gas prices go up 30 to 40 per cent effective March 1.

And Finance Minister Evan Wolfe, the cabinet minister responsible for B.C. Hydro, said today any suggestion of rate increases at this time is just speculation.

Barnett, manager of rates and costs, said in an interview he hopes an increase in electricity rates could be held to less than 10 per cent but warned a conservative person would budget for 15 per cent.

The B.C. Energy Commission is considering a Hydro application for higher field prices for natural gas and the National Energy Board is reviewing its decision to allow a transmission rate increase.

Wolfe said such rate increases based on an application by Westcoast Transmission to increase its transmission fees and oil producers to increase field prices, are far from being approved.

Bennett said he doesn't give any credibility to the report and he said he hopes the public doesn't either.

The premier said Hydro should be holding its rates down because the government is removing the $60 million annual transit deficit from the Crown corporation.

Barnett says Hydro's own internal costs would account for five per cent of the natural gas hike — the rest would come from increased field and transmission prices.

The energy commission is expected to rule before Christmas on whether or not to permit the higher field prices.

Synanon Snake Death Plot?

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Police hunting the would-be slayers who tried to kill a lawyer with a large rattlesnake planted in his home broadcast an all-points bulletin Wednesday night for a car belonging to the Synanon Foundation.

Attorney Paul Morantz, 32, who said he was warned he was on a Synanon "hit list" after he won a $300,000 judgment against Synanon last month, was in serious condition with what a doctor called "severe" snakebite poisoning.

Synanon headquarters, a ranch north of San Francisco near Marshall, Calif., has made no comment on the case.

The rattlesnake, its rattles cut off to silence its characteristic warning buzz, was in a mailbox in the wall of Morantz's home. Leaving the house on the way to a World Series game Tuesday, Morantz pushed his hand in the box and the serpent sank its fangs into his palm and held on as he drew back, hauling the 4½-foot-long reptile out of the box.

"It felt like having my hand in a vice and it kept tightening," Morantz said.

Firemen called by neighbors cornered the snake in the living room and chopped off its head with shovels.

A neighbor reported seeing two men put something in Morantz's mailbox earlier that day. The unidentified neighbor, suspicious because tape had been placed on their car's license plate to alter the number, discovered and wrote down the true number, police said.

The car, a 1973 green Plymouth, is registered to the Synanon Foundation in Marshall, Calif., detectives said. Police throughout the state were asked to halt it and hold the occupants on suspicion of attempted murder.

San Francisco radio station KCBS reported a group of 60 former members of the controversial drug rehabilitation group, headed by former Synanon president Jack Hurst, presented a report to the state attorney general's office alleging "dozens of acts of violence" by the organization and asking for a state investigation.

Police in other cities, including New York and Berkeley, Calif., reportedly confirmed they are also investigating complaints of threats against reporters and news executives connected to reports Synanon disliked, including Time magazine editor-in-chief Hedley Donovan.

Genetic Work Nets A Nobel

STOCKHOLM (AP) — The 1978 Nobel Prize for medicine was awarded today to a Swiss and two Americans for research that developed a revolutionary new tool for studying the way in which genes determine heredity.

The winners are Daniel Nathans and Hamilton Smith, both of Johns Hopkins University in Baltimore, and microbiology professor Werner Arber of Basel, Switzerland. They will share a prize of $165,000.

The Nobel Committee of the Karolinska Institute of Medicine cited the three for the discovery of restriction enzymes and their application to problems of molecular genetics.

Idi Reported Under Siege

NAIROBI, Kenya (UPI) — Uganda charged today that Tanzanian troops had invaded southern Uganda and heavy fighting was under way. The report triggered speculation of a new coup attempt against President Idi Amin.

The invasion claim by a military spokesman in Kampala [illegible] after Amin, furious at President Carter's trade ban against Uganda, threatened to take "very drastic" action against some 300 Americans still living in Uganda.

The unpredictable Amin often in the past has used the threat of foreign "invasions" as a smokescreen to try to cover up the more than a dozen assassination and coup attempts against him.

Two days ago, East African capitals were swept with reports that Amin had crushed yet another plot and highly placed diplomatic sources said "there definitely appears to be something happening now in Uganda."

Amin's threat against the nearly 300 American missionaries, technicians and businessmen living in Uganda came only days after Carter banned all trade with Uganda, currently running at about $40 million a year, in a move to underscore his denunciations of "mass murders" and "genocide" at Amin's hands.

West German diplomats, who represent U.S. interests in Kampala, held a series of crisis meetings with Ugandan government officials to try to discover Amin's intentions.

A spokesman said later, "No decision (about American citizens) has been taken and we will just have to wait and see. But the situation is calm."

Amin responded promptly to Carter's embargo and Radio Uganda warned, "the life president says that he is very soon going to make a very drastic and serious step on America or anyone connected with America."

Broadbent Rakes 'Ritual'

OTTAWA (UPI) — The government should scrap the "ritualistic debate" following Wednesday's throne speech, and immediately implement increased public sector investment to stimulate the economy, New Democratic leader Ed Broadbent says.

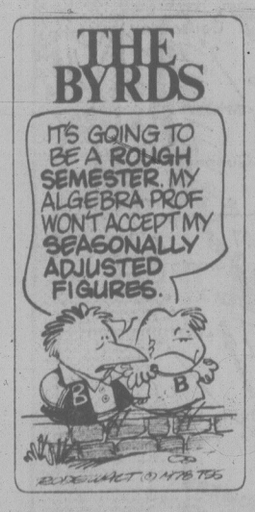

Conservative leader Joe Clark also criticized the throne speech, calling Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau's plans for the new session of Parliament a "rehash" of old policy.

Broadbent said the throne speech "made no economic sense at all," and the government should come up with a new budget.

He said the government's national economic policy "was nothing but cutbacks. That's the economic policy. And it makes no economic sense at all."

"We need stimulation of the economy and we need public sector investment," the NDP leader said.

"What we've got in the speech from the throne is a rehash of what the prime minister has been talking about since July," Clark said.

48 Killed As Blast Rips Ship

SINGAPORE (Reuter) — Forty-eight persons were killed and at least 50 injured when an explosion ripped through the boiler room of the Liberian-registered oil tanker Spyros today.

Hospital sources said many of the injured were suffering burns to the face and body as well as smoke inhalation.

Authorities were investigating the cause of the blast, believed to be the worst such incident here since an oil barge blew up in Singapore harbor in 1972.

The 35,676-ton Spyros, in Singapore for repairs, is managed by the Niarchos group.

Alert on Twin Otters After 11-Death Crash

OTTAWA (CP) — The government has issued an international alert on the operation of the de Havilland Twin Otter aircraft as a result of last month's crash in Vancouver of an AirWest flight from Victoria that took 11 lives, federal transport officials said today.

The alert, for pilots of the twin-engined plane, had been issued to Canadian operators and to the governments of about 70 countries for distribution to their operators.

It has been issued even though federal investigators have drawn no firm conclusions about either a human or a mechanical failure causing the crash, officials said. The investigation is continuing.

A Vancouver report has said investigators have blamed a malfunction in the plane's propellor reverse pitch system for the mechanical cause of the crash.

But H.A. Fawcett, head of investigations here said that while this possibility is being closely examined "we haven't made any firm conclusions yet."

There are less than 100 of the aircraft in Canada. About 500 are in foreign countries, many in the United States, Ken Owen, chief of airworthiness, said in an interview.

The alert instructs pilots on the use of cockpit power levers, recommending that they do not put the plane into ground idle while still in the air. The normal "stop flight idle" should be used instead.

Officials say the ground idle is not required in normal operation of the Twin Otters but is used by some pilots for steep approaches although it is not necessary.

There was no conclusive evidence that the practice was used by the pilot of the aircraft which crashed Sept. 2 in Vancouver harbor, killing 11 persons. Two of 11 Japanese tourists on the plane survived.

Cullen Rejects Pleas On UIC Cuts

OTTAWA (CP) — Employment Minister Bud Cullen turned a deaf ear Wednesday to provincial pleas for a year's delay in the proposed proposed tightening of the unemployment insurance program.

The provinces asked for a delay of at least a month to assess the impact of the UIC proposals on grounds the proposed clampdown will cost them millions in increased welfare and other aid to the unemployed.

The shortfall for B.C. alone was estimated at $35 million in welfare, social services and lost revenue in 1979, by Labor Minister Allan Williams of B.C., who co-chaired the conference with Cullen.

During a one-day federal-provincial ministers conference, Cullen faced protests that the provinces were not fully consulted before the government announced plans last month to chop the insurance program by $580 million. The savings are to be redirected into job creation and training expected to cost $710 million in 1979-1980.

Williams said a delay is sought because the federal government has not assessed the impact the insurance changes will have on provincial spending "associated with a flood of former unemployment insurance beneficiaries."

Although most provinces agree the unemployment insurance scheme is being abused, Williams said, "we are not prepared to accept at this time these very stringent measures without further examination."

Keith Norton, Ontario social services minister, predicted the UIC proposals would cost his province $15 million in welfare payments.

Harold Collins, acting labor minister of Newfoundland, said the impact would total $44 million in 1979-1980 and $66 million the following year.

Cullen told reporters there was no way he could eliminate the provincial concern at a one-day meeting but he insisted the federal plan "does not have a significant impact on welfare rolls."

He could not put a figure on the impact on the provinces, and Williams said that inside the closed meeting "we didn't get many clear answers from Mr. Cullen and this disturbs us."

The government proposes to tighten the insurance program by increasing weeks of work required from persons claiming benefits twice in a year, increasing insured earnings required by new claimants, decreasing benefits for all claimants and taxing back some benefits from high-income earners.

Provincial ministers said Cullen plans to have the proposals before the Commons in a bill in a couple of weeks.

Barry Casson straps Harry into jacket

Harry pours on the concentration . . .

. . . and jacket starts to slip off . . .

. . . by Harry, he's done it again!

John McKay photos

Escape Ace Eyes Jump For Jackpot

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

IF Victoria magician Harry Herbert has his way, some day next summer he'll climb into a straitjacket, tie a parachute around his hips and leap out of a plane at 2,000 feet.

There are those who say Harry should be put in a straitjacket right now but Harry just shrugs.

He wanted to jump this summer, but couldn't find anyone willing to insure him.

Undaunted, he says he'll try again. He has his sights on the Abbotsford air show, or failing that the Canadian National Exhibition in Toronto.

Harry says he has it all figured out.

He'll have precisely 22 seconds to get out of the jacket and pull the rip cord.

The landing may be a bit tricky, coming down head first and all, but Harry says it's simply a matter of learning how to roll on impact.

For Harry, who has his own furniture repair business in the city and works as part-time waiter at the Gorge Hotel beer parlor, the trick is the ultimate test of his skills as an escape artist.

He realizes it may be the ultimate, period. But that's show biz.

Harry makes no bones about why he wants to do it.

"Money," he says quickly, without thinking.

There's fame too. No one has ever done it before.

The risk, however, is carefully calculated.

For years Harry has been in training. Each day begins with a half hour work out escaping from his straitjacket. His average time is 12 to 14 seconds. His best yet is nine and 8/100 of a second. The world record is nine seconds flat, held by a 28-year-old Florida man.

The same individual recently broke Harry's 21-second record for getting out of a straitjacket while suspended upside down. He did it in 19 seconds.

Harry is gunning again for both titles.

"Any rational thinking person can get out of a straitjacket," he says. "It's only a matter of practice."

HARRY, who is in his 40s — he won't tell his precise age but he admits to having three children, the oldest, 19 — says he's been intrigued with magic since he was a 12-year-old boy growing up in Sussex County in New Brunswick.

Shortly after coming to Victoria in 1960, he joined the Magic Circle, a select group of local magicians. To qualify for membership each person has to perform a trick. Harry's was to be tied up with 40 feet of rope from which he had to free himself within 40 seconds. Harry did it in 20 seconds.

Performing under the stage name Sebastian Mirakel, he's entertained thousands of kids and is a regular feature at Butchart Garden's summer program.

At the drop of a hat he'll display his talents. Clenching his left fist, he extracts a red silk handkerchief. He shoves it back in his hand. Presto, it's gone. He'll get you to tie his hands — "tighter, tighter," he urges — and then will ask you to drape his coat over his arms. "No, put it higher," he'll says reaching his hand out from under the coat.

The action catches you by surprise. You remove the coat. His hands are tied as before.

His repertoire includes card tricks, tricks of illusion, like sawing a woman in half — endwise — and tricks involving Indian Temple doves and rabbits.

Soft-spoken and articulate, he takes his craft seriously. Amid the clutter of his office which takes up the ground floor of a former Chinese laundry on Princess, is a collection of books on magic. He's studied the works of the Great Houdini, but has no pretensions of emulating him.

"In everything I do I want to do something completely different," he says, "something no one else has done before."

His aerial stunt with the straitjacket, however, is unquestionably the most hazardous he's attempted.

Police Like Longer Shifts

Victoria police officers have voted solidly in favor of an experimental program that has them working longer shifts.

In a poll taken by the Victoria Police Union earlier this week 75 of 86 officers were in favor of continuing the 10 and 12-hour shift system now in place for a six month trial run.

The system was put into effect for six months to end Oct. 31 and the police board asked the union to gauge the response of officers to the new hours.

Under the system members of the traffic division work 10-hour shifts while members of the patrol division work 12-hour shifts.

A union spokesman said morale on the force is at an all-time high because of the new longer shifts.

Hard Look Taken At Harbor Planes

By MARK HUME
Times Staff

Transport Canada has launched a full review of air operations in Victoria harbor.

Regional superintendent of airways Don Mills said Wednesday Transport Canada studied the Inner Harbor two years ago and found the situation acceptable.

The second look has been prompted because of statements by civic officials.

"In light of some concerns that were expressed recently by your mayor and a couple of aldermen we thought we'd just take a good look at the situation," Mills said in an interview from his Vancouver office.

Following an AirWest Airlines Ltd. crash last month in Vancouver harbor that took the lives of 11 persons, Mayor Mike Young, Ald. Bill Tindall and Ald. Robin Blencoe voiced fears that Victoria might be headed for its own float plane accident.

Mills said he's sure the harbor is safe at present but that increasing numbers of float planes and surface traffic — especially pleasure boats — could lead to difficulties if not controlled.

"There's a obvious increase in surface traffic this summer, what with all the new floats being built, and it's just something we have to take a look at."

Mills said that "I can only see more marine traffic in the future and . . . a small increase in (privately operated) float traffic with a larger increase in commercial float traffic."

Mills said one of the immediate results of the review will be the issuance of an aviation notice outlining approved arrival and departure paths and clearly describing the situation in the harbor. The notice would be given to all pilots flying into the area.

In a recent letter to Blencoe on the same subject, regional aviation safety officer D.A. Price said the review could lead to the possible elimination of private float plane operators from the harbor.

Mills agreed this is a possibility, saying: "The day is coming when there are some restrictions on the type of aircraft licencees. That day is coming, just don't ask me when."

Red Tide Skips Local Waters

Federal fisheries officer John Forgie said today there is no sign of poisonous red tide plankton in Victoria area waters.

The plankton, which has resulted in most of Puget Sound in Washington State being closed to shellfish harvesting, can nauseate, paralyse and even kill.

Forgie said so far no trace has been found of the plankton, which contains a neurotoxin that affects the nervous system.

Dr. Ray Watkins, food program coordinator for the King County-Seattle Health Department, warned Wednesday: "It can cause nausea, partial paralysis and tingling in the lips for a few days or, in large quantities, death."

So far five victims have been reported, all in Snohomish County north of Seattle. Four of them required hospitalization.

There have been no deaths. Health officials call it one of the worst outbreaks of red tide in the state's history.

Shellfish ingest the toxin, and humans can become ill if they eat the shellfish. Crab are not affected, officials say.

The toxicity in the water around Whidbey Island measured 3,000 micrograms, said health department spokesman Jack Lilja. The acceptable level is 80 micrograms, he said.

Probe Asked On Contract

The owner of G.W.G. Rentals Ltd. said Wednesday there should be an RCMP investigation into the handling of a contract between the federal public works department and Wessex Construction Ltd. for work at the Ocean Sciences Institute.

Ed Gait said his firm, G.W.G. Rentals, is one of the sub-contractors on the Pat Bay Institute project which is going to suffer financially because Wessex, the general contractor, has gone bankrupt.

The Victoria company filed for bankruptcy in August leaving about 14 creditors and an outstanding debt on two jobs at the institute of about $133,000.

Gait wrote to federal Public Works Minister Judd Buchanan on Aug. 14 and was told in an Oct. 3 reply a preliminary analysis indicated the sub-trades would be paid 85 cents for every dollar they were owed.

However, Gait said Wednesday the minister is obviously uninformed on the matter because the sub-contractors were told at a bankruptcy hearing in Victoria Aug. 22 that they would be lucky to get 30 cents for every dollar.

To Gait that means that somewhere along the line the federal government's system for dealing with contractors was abused.

He said on most projects the government will give the contractor 85 per cent of his money only after he signs a declaration that all the sub-trades have been paid.

The remaining 15 per cent is held back until the project has been completed and all payments met, he said.

But because the government's holdback in this case is only enough to pay the sub-trades 30 cents on the dollar, Gait said it is obvious either someone has signed the declaration without paying the sub-trades or someone in the public works department was releasing money without such a declaration.

"There's something wrong," Gait said.

Gait said his company is only owed about $360 but it is the principle which concerns him.

He said it is particularly upsetting that something like this can happen on a government contract at a time when more contractors in the Victoria area than possibly anywhere else in the country are going bankrupt.

Victoria chartered accountat Peter Lloyd, appointed trustee for Wessex, was not available for comment.

BLAZE GUTS DORMITORY

Fire burned out a $150,000 dormitory building at Brentwood College Wednesday forcing the private school to arrange temporary accommodation for 60 students.

No one was injured in the blaze that broke out shortly before noon.

School officials said students were evacuated from the building without mishap.

The Mill Bay school announced it will begin repairs immediately and does not anticipate any problems in coping with the consequences of the fire.

Shots Reported On Sea Lions

Colwood RCMP are continuing an investigation into a report that Steller's sea lions resting on Race Rocks were shot at by a commercial fisherman.

School teacher Jack Hannam of Metchosin told police he was sports fishing near Race Rocks earlier this week when he saw a commercial boat pull in close to the rocks and fire on the sea lions.

Hannam said six rifle shots were fired from the boat's cabin.

Hannam said when he asked the skipper of the commercial craft what was going on the man replied he was "just killing some sea lions."

Police say they have located the commercial boat in question, but the investigation seems stalled because no proof has been found that any of the sea lions were hurt.

Property Taxes Won't Rise For Transit . . . If – Curtis

Property taxes in Greater Victoria won't be raised to finance urban transit if the system is run efficiently, Municipal Affairs Minister Hugh Curtis said Wednesday.

Curtis said property taxes will not increase to pay transit costs for at least five years and not even then if service and administration improves under the new Urban Transit Authority.

He said the Capital and the Greater Vancouver regional boards have been misleading the public by saying property owners will bear most of the costs of urban transit after 1981 because other financing methods are insufficient.

Under the cost-sharing formula worked out by the province, local governments will pay for their share of transit costs first by a gasoline tax of three cents a gallon, then by a B.C. Hydro surcharge on electricity bills and as a last resort by increased property taxes.

Capital Regional District chairman Jim Campbell said last week the first two stages of the financing formula will only cover spiralling transit costs until 1981. After that, property owners will foot most of the transit bill.

Curtis said those statements are based on data that is outdated and incomplete.

Revenues from the three-cent gasoline tax will meet transit costs for at least five years, he claimed. After that, the gas tax could be increased to five or even seven cents a gallon, he said.

Referendum Proposed To Help Buy Sidney Is.

By HUMPHRY DAVY
Times Staff

A referendum to raise money towards the purchase of Sidney Island for park use was proposed today by the executive director of the B.C. Sierra Club.

Bob Nixon of Victoria said the referendum should be confined to Victoria and Saanich Peninsula municipalities — the people who would benefit the most.

The 1,783-acre island, which has about 15 miles of shoreline, is for sale for $3.7 million by owner Jack Todd who has had private offers but would prefer the island become a park. The island is 18 miles north of Victoria and about three miles by water from the town of Sidney.

Nixon's proposal follows an announcement by the Southern Vancouver Island committee of the Outdoor Recreation Council that a campaign has been launched to have the island acquired either by the provincial or federal governments for use as a park.

Nixon thinks there's a better chance of getting senior governments to acquire the island if peninsula residents through their local goverments make a contribution towards its purchase.

"We would benefit most from this beautiful island," he said. "So we should take more than a passing interest in its future use."

He suggested if the municipalities raised between $700,000 and $1 million, it would be a major step towards buying the island.

Provincial and federal government agencies, plus private conservation organizations, would be asked for grants to complete the purchase, he said.

"The island is a major stopover and refuge for thousands of migratory waterfowl," he said. "Provincial and federal wildlife agencies, plus Ducks Unlimited, should be interested in making contributions towards preserving this aspect of the island."

Nixon pointed out that Sidney Island in the last 10 years has become a favorite recreation area for many people on the peninsula. They make great use of the 200-acre Sidney Spit marine park on the northern tip.

"The island will become an even more important recreational area as the population increases amd empty spaces on the Saanich Peninsula are filled with dwellings," he said.

He said for this reason peninsula residents should be asked if they are prepared to foot part of the bill.

"It's their only chance to acquire the island," he added. "Once it is sold to a developer, it will be too late to consider other alternatives."

He said the provincial government could use some of the money it receives from lotteries to pay a part of the purchase price.
